Hold on Jagdeo's pension bill

By Bert Wilkinson

Guyana's major opposition coalition has withdrawn a court case challenging a hefty pension package for Bharrat Jagdeo, to allow the Caribbean Community nation's parliament the privilege of chopping the former president's remuneration to a more reasonable sum; but the work of the opposition could be stymied in the long run if Jagdeo's successor refuses to assent to the bill, making it law as is widely expected.

Filed earlier this year in the name of opposition legislator Desmond Trotman, of A Partnership

Barbados

Barbados is poised to create history this month, when it becomes the first Caribbean island to take over the chairmanship of the World Health Organization (WHO).

According to reports, Barbados taking over the chairmanship will mean that citizens from small island states will have a greater presence within that body.

Minister of Health, Donville Innis, said he wanted to see more West Indians working in international organizations.

"Barbados is a member of the executive board of the World Health Organization. We are tipped to take over as chair of the World Health Organization," he said.

Grenada

Grenada Finance Minister Nazim Burke has remained optimistic that an agreement could be reached with Taiwan regarding the repayment of a multi-million dollar loan to Grenada.

Burke said Taipei remains receptive to a new proposal presented to the Tillman Thomas government regarding the US$30 million loan.

"We believe that some kind of resolution is present," he told reporters.

Grenada has proposed the consolidation of the Taiwanese loans and a new schedule of payments that starts with the first down payment of what is called a substantial part of the loan.

Billions of foreign dollars flowed into Caribbean in 2011

By Nelson A. King

The United Nations' Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) says that the region received US$153.448 billion from foreign direct investment (FDI) last year.

In a new report, "Foreign Direct Investment in Latin America and the Caribbean 2011," released in Santiago, Chile on May 3, ECLAC said the new figure represents 10 percent of the global total flows.

It said this is about the largest amount of FDI received by the region so far.

In 2010, ECLAC said the region received US$120.880 billion, whereas in 2009, due to the international economic crisis, investments decreased to US$81.589 billion.

Until then, the highest record had been registered in 2008, when investments amounted to US$137.001 billion, ECLAC said.

In 2011, the main foreign direct investment recipients in the region were Brazil (US$66.660 billion, representing 43.8 percent of the total of flows into the region), Mexico (US$19.440 billion), Chile (17.299 billion), Colombia (US$13.234 billion), Peru (US$7.659 billion), Argentina (US$7.243 billion), Venezuela (US$5.302 billion) and Uruguay (US$2.528 billion).

Of these countries, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Peru and Uruguay reached "historic records," ECLAC said.

In Central America, ECLAC said FDI incomes increased by 36 percent compared to 2010, where the amounts received by Panama (US$2.790 billion), Costa Rica (US$2.104 billion) and Honduras (US$1.014 billion) stand out.

In the Caribbean, flows soared by 20 percent compared to the previous year, with the Dominican Republic at the head with US$2.371 billion, ECLAC said.

"In spite of the prevailing uncertainty in global financial markets, Latin American and Caribbean economies attracted important amounts of foreign direct investment during 2011," said Alicia Bárcena, ECLAC's executive secretary.

"These amounts should remain high in 2012," she added.

In 2011, ECLAC said 46 percent of the net income deriving from FDI was due to profit re-investments, whilst the remaining percentage was due to capital contributions and loans among companies.

According to the organization, this denotes the "trust of transnational companies in the region and important business opportunities within it."

As shown in the report, ECLAC said this tendency, which started in 2002, is a result of the amount of assets accumulated by transnational companies in the region and an increase in their profitability due to the good economic performance of the countries and to high international prices of exported raw materials.

Nevertheless, ECLAC identifies a current phenomenon that is increasingly relevant since 2004: the growing repatriation of profits by transnational corporations investing in the region, "a fact that reminds that FDI is not a unidirectional flow."

Jamaican gets the ok to sue Barbados

By Azad Ali

The Caribbean Court of Justice (CCJ) has granted special leave to 24-year-old Jamaican, Shanique Myrie, to begin proceedings against the Barbados government after she alleged she was sexually assaulted by a female immigration officer, insulted and then denied entry to Barbados on March 14 last year.

The five-member panel of the CCJ, headed by its president, Sir Dennis Byron, approved the application during a special sitting in Barbados, the first time the regional court, which was established in 2001 to replace the British Privy Council, sat outside its Trinidad-based headquarters.

Attorneys for the Jamaican will now have 21 days to file the necessary documents.

She wants the court to determine what is the minimum standard of treatment to be given to CARICOM nationals moving within the region under the Revised Treaty of Chaguaramas that governs the CARICOM Single Market and Economy (CSME) allowing for the free movement of skills, labor, goods and services across the community.

Earlier, Myrie's attorney Michelle Brown, told the court her client was subjected to "forceful brutish language" by immigration officials at the Sir Grantley Adams International Airport on her arrival.

She said they were attempting to get Myrie to agree "she was doing something illegal, like having drugs" and had even threatened to have her jailed and twice made her bend over in order to carry out a cavity search.

The attorney argued that there was "no justification for the increasing level of the intrusion that she faced," noting that "initially Barbados claimed she (Myrie) was a victim of human trafficking."

But she told the court that if that was the case "then the role of the government was to protect her" and not brutalize her.

The Jamaican-born attorney said her client is "still not certain what laws of Barbados she broke" resulting in her being refused entry into a CARICOM country that had signed on to the 2007 declaration allowing for the free movement of people within the region.

Call him Dr. Baldwin Spencer

By Nelson A. King

Antigua and Barbuda Prime Minister Baldwin Spencer on May 12 received an honorary doctorate degree from Mid-Continent University, Kentucky.

"President of Mid-Continent University, Dr. Robert Imhoff says that they are delighted to have Prime Minister Spencer in Kentucky and to honor him for his work in the development of the people of Antigua and Barbuda, the international community, sports and culture," according to a statement from the Antiguan government.

Spencer also had the opportunity to address the more than 200 graduates and hundreds of parents and supporters, following which he received a standing ovation, the statement said.

In his address to the graduates, Spencer urged them to be shining lights in their communities and to make positive contributions to the development of their nation.

"For some of you this is a new beginning, an opportunity to explore new pathways and examine new horizons in life; for others, it is a continuation of advancement in a particular field of work," he said.

"But for all of you, this graduation ceremony is a testimony of your desire to continue a life journey of service and stewardship to your community," he added.

"It is a major step towards seeking and acquiring the tools, skills and wisdom that will foster confidence, goodwill and pride in life," Spencer continued.

He said the occasion was historic, because it was the first time a prime minister from Antigua and Barbuda had addressed a graduation ceremony at Mid-Continent University.

Spencer said the relationship between the institution and

Trailblazer Awards from Manhattan Borough President

By Tequila Minsky

Borough President Scott Stringer presented awards recently at the seventh annual Trailblazers Program and Award Ceremony of Manhattan that recognizes members of the community that have blazed a trail for others to follow.

This year's recipients reflect civil rights activism and two very different areas in criminal justice. One of the youngest female champions of the civil rights movement, Tamika Mallory of the National Action Network (NAN), founded by the Rev. Al Sharpton, received the first award. Introduced to the world of advocacy through rallies, marches, vigils and protests by her parents, founding members of NAN, Mallory rose through the ranks of responsible positions in the organization.

At the age of 30, she is the national executive director and Rev. Sharpton's second in command. She has worked closely with the Obama Administration as a civil rights advocate in areas of education, women's rights, health care reform, gun violence and police misconduct.

Thirty-year veteran New York Times journalist (now retired) Shelia Rule's volunteer work with Riverside Churches

Prison Ministry led to correspondences with people in prison, which eventually led to her founding Think Outside the Cell Foundation and its publishing arm, Resilience Multimedia.

"Spotlighting on their humanity can make a difference," Rule said at the ceremony after receiving the award. The foundation, co-founded with her husband Joseph Robinson, seeks to end the stigma of incarceration and help those who've been in prison and their families.

"Trailblazer, no!" said third recipient Norman Seabrook, labor activist and president of the New York City Corrections Officers Benevolent Association since 1995.

"I stand on the shoulders of those before me. We have to continue to make strides for those who follow." He pointed out the eradication of representation with the Wisconsin unions and how the South is working to take away voting rights. "It's coming, a tsunami that will affect all of us," he said as he spoke of the importance of staying vigilant and being awake and aware.

Seabrook said of Rev. Sharpton, "We don't agree on everything, but we agree that the struggle continues."

NYABJ honors Naylor and Noble

By Vinette K. Pryce

The New York Association of Black Journalists paid tribute to the late Gil Noble on May 15 during their 24th annual Scholarship and Awards Banquet at the Malcolm X & Dr. Betty Shabazz Memorial and Educational Center.

The event honored the legacy of the veteran television journalist and long-time host of WABC-TV New York's public affairs program "Like It Is" who passed away last month at the age of 80.

Noble, a four-time Emmy Award winner was born in Harlem and joined WABC-TV in 1967 as a reporter and later became an anchor of the station's weekend newscasts.

Former diversity advocate Robert Naylor was also recognized with a lifetime achievement honor.

"From News 12 Westchester's coverage of the Danroy Henry killing to CNN's coverage of the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. monument dedication to recording artist Beyonce Knowles' Essence magazine article about how a nine-month break changed her life, we congratulate everyone," said NYABJ President

Michael J. Feeney.

"Robert Naylor, who spent more than 30 years as a reporter, editor, and news executive for newspapers, television stations-and most recently The Associated Press-is the recipient of the 2012 Lifetime Achievement Award for his tireless efforts as a diversity advocate to helping other minorities break into the news industry," said Feeney.

Naylor spent most of his career at the Associated Press where he became the second Black bureau chief and later chair of the AP Diversity Council.

Naylor is a long-time member of the National Association of Black Journalists, the National Association of Black Journalists, and a founding member of the LGBT Task Force.

He is also member of the National Lesbian and Gay Journalists Association, and has been a member of the Asian, Hispanic, and Native American journalist associations, as well as the National Association of Multicultural Media Executives and the Media Diversity Networking Group.

The work of more than 40 journalists was also recognized.

The event, hosted by WNBC's Pat Battle and Black Enterprise Magazine's Shannon Lanier, benefits the NYABJ's college scholarship fund.

Developing states commit to reduce reliance on fossil fuels

By Nelson A. King

The United Nations said on May 9 that 20 Small Island Developing States (SIDS) have announced new actions to reduce dependence on fossil fuels and end poverty, as they wrapped up a sustainable energy conference in Barbados, organized by the U.N. and the Barbados government.

The "Barbados Declaration" calls for universal access to modern and affordable renewable energy services, while protecting the environment, ending poverty and creating new opportunities for economic growth, said the U.N. Development Program (UNDP).

The declaration – adopted ahead of next month's U.N. Conference on Sustainable Development (Rio+20) – includes an annex with voluntary commitments of 20 SIDS to take actions toward providing universal access to energy, switching to renewable energy and reducing dependence on fossil fuels.

It emphasizes that there are commercially feasible options in many SIDS for providing energy such as wind, solar, geothermal, and oceans energy.

"However, these technologies must be made accessible, affordable and adaptable to the needs and particular circumstances of SIDS communities," declaration said.

"In this regard, we strongly urge the international community, particularly developed countries, to ensure the provision of financial resources, technology transfer and capacity building to SIDS," it added.

The U.N. said Barbados also announced its plan to increase the share of renewable energy in the country to 29 per cent of all electricity consumption by 2029.

Among other commitments, the Maldives plans to achieve carbon neutrality in the energy sector by year 2020, while Seychelles will seek to produce 15 per cent of its energy supply from renewable energy by 2030.

The declaration also recognized the importance of the Sustainable Energy for All initiative, launched by Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon last September, which seeks to ensure universal access to modern energy services, double the rate of improvement in energy efficiency and double the share of renewable energy in the global energy mix, all by 2030.

The two-day conference, which ended on May 9, brought together more than 100 heads of state, ministers, leading development experts, civil society activists, business executives and U.N. officials from 39 SIDS.

Fingerprint program

governors of New York and Massachusetts and immigrant groups, the Obama administration was expected to extend Secure Communities this week.

In a letter sent over the weekend to U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder, de Blasio warned of the risks Secure Communities poses to public safety.

"The Secure Communities program takes fingerprints of suspects in jail and sends them to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), which, in turn, shares the information with the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE)," he wrote.

"The program has resulted in the deportation of thousands of people accused—but never convicted—of committing a crime," he added.

"As a law enforcement strategy, Secure Communities has backfired, eroding the trust between immigrant communities and law enforcement—making our communities less safe," de Blasio continued.

He said local law enforcement requires the "active and sustained cooperation of immigrant communities to effectively fight crime."

"The implementation of this program intimidates immigrants, reducing the likelihood that they will report crimes or come forward as witnesses for fear of risking deportation," de Blasio said.

"The Secure Communities program sends exactly the wrong message to our immigrant communities, at the expense of public safety. For the sake of our security, I urge you to stop the expansion of this program at once," he told Holder, the son of Barbadian immigrants,

In e-mails dispatched late last week to officials and the police in Massachusetts and New York, ICE officials said Secure Communities would be activated "in all remaining jurisdictions" on May 15.

"Secure Communities has proven to be the single most valuable tool in allowing the agency to eliminate the ad hoc approach of the past and focus on criminal aliens and repeat immigration law violators," said Barbara Gonzalez, an ICE spokeswoman, in a statement.

"At the end of the day, this is a federal program," she added. "We have to make our own decisions based on our law enforcement operational needs."

Deval Patrick refused to sign an agreement with ICE to expand Secure Communities beyond a pilot program in the Boston area since 2006.

At the same time, New York's Gov. Andrew Cuomo, said he wanted to suspend the program, which had already been initiated in a number of counties in his state.

Critics say Secure Communities is an "overly wide dragnet" that seeks to deport a significant number of illegal Caribbean and other immigrants with no criminal record.

They also say these immigrants were arrested for minor infractions, and that the policy fosters racial profiling.

Jagdeo's Pension bill

For National Unity (APNU), Trotman's lawyer Christopher Ram filed papers withdrawing the court writ, after parliamentary Speaker Raphael Trotman ruled during debate last week that the House could not debate the pension package while matter is in the court.

Oposition parties APNU and the Alliance For Change (AFC) have a one-seat majority in the 65-seat assembly and have vowed to cut Jagdeo's pension package worth $15,000 a month, to just over a third of that amount, saying that at age 48, Jagdeo is able-bodied and has a long work life and earning possibilities ahead of him. Both had made the issue major campaign themes, and are under pressure to deliver, given public abhorrence to the bill.

The PPP had used its simple majority in the last parliament to approve the humungous pension for Jagdeo, but legislators remind constituents that the shoe is now on the other foot.

Debate on the APNU motion was suspended until the house meets again on May 30, by which time the court case would have been withdrawn, allowing for debate of Jagdeo's controversial package, which includes tax-free salary plus benefits. However, Donald Ramotar who succeeded Jagdeo as president and is as well from the East Indian-dominated governing party, has to assent to any amended bill to make it law.

The party has already signaled in the negative. Trotman said that if he fails to sign, the bill will be returned to the house for a two-thirds vote, meaning it will never become law, as government legislators won't back the opposition.

"Therefore I will have to go back to the court for a ruling as parliament would be tied up," said constitutional expert Raymond Gaskin.

Public anger at the remuneration package is directly linked to the widespread belief that the former head of state is already well off and is widely believed to have a hand in several businesses run by close associates; charges that he has denied. Critics have identified EZ Jet as one, but its front owners so Jagdeo is not linked.

Billion$ flowed into Caribbean

"FDI revenue transferred back to the countries of origin has increased from US$20 billion per year between 1998 and 2003 to US$84 billion between 2008 and 2010 per year," Bárcena said.

The document also points out that FDI strengthens the specialization of production in Latin America and the Caribbean.

In 2011, it says 57 percent of foreign direct investments received by South America (except Brazil) were directed to the natural resources sector, 36 percent to services and 7 percent to manufacturing. In exchange, 7.8 percent of FDI received by Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean were oriented to natural resources, 39.7 percent to manufacturing and 52.5 percent to services.

Meanwhile, 46.4 percent of foreign direct investments received by Brazil were directed to manufacturing, 44.3 percent to services and 9.2 percent to natural resources, the report says.

"In this context, it is urgent to promote policies to guide FDI and leverage its potential benefits, among which are the knowledge and technological exchange and the increase of local capacities by strengthening national innovation systems, creating production chains, building human capacity and fostering local entrepreneurial development," Bárcena said.

Investments made by Latin American and Caribbean transnational corporations -also known as trans-Latins- decreased to US$ 22.605 billion in 2011 - having amounted to US$44.924 billion in 2010, ECLAC said.

In spite of this decrease, ECLAC underlined that these corporations are still in an expansion phase.

The ECLAC report shows that the European Union (EU), as a bloc, is the largest investor in Latin America and the Caribbean.

In the last decade, the EU invested an average of US$30 billion per year in the region, representing 40 percent of the total received, ECLAC said.

Grenada PM survives no confidence vote

By Nelson A. King

Grenada Prime Minister Tillman Thomas on Tuesday night, May 15, survived a vote of no confidence during a marathon debate in the House of Representatives.

Most government parliamentarians voted along party lines, denying the main opposition New National Party (NNP) of the four votes needed for the motion's success.

After a robust, 13-hour debate, the motion was defeated eight votes to five, with one abstention and one absentee.

Backbencher Michael Church was the only government MP to support the motion, which called for the dissolution of Parliament and fresh general elections.

But one government lawmaker sided with the opposition; while Foreign Minister Karl Hood abstained from the vote while supporting the motion "in principle"; and another minister was absent, mourning her husband's death.

Prime Minister Tillman Thomas.

"It is very clear what we have been seeing that we are facing a very dysfunctional government that lacks leadership and direction," said Dr Keith Mitchell, leader of the NNP and a former prime minister, who tabled a motion of no confidence against Thomas.

"We would be abdicating our responsibility as leaders of this country in the opposition if we fail to bring to light the plight of the people in this dismal situation of governance that we are now facing," added Mitchell, a three-term prime minister, whose 2008 election loss elevated the veteran politician Thomas to lead the government for the first time.

Mitchell's NNP, which holds four of the 15 seats in the House of Representatives, needed support from at least four government MPs for the no-confidence motion to succeed.

Speculation had shifted that those from the government benches, who had fallen out of favor with the Thomas administration, was most likely to support the motion.

They included former Foreign Affairs and Tourism Minister Peter David, who resigned last month after Information Minister Glen Noel named him among ministers allegedly seeking to remove Thomas.

Also reportedly out of favor is Joseph Gilbert, the environment minister, who was fired from the Cabinet earlier this year for promising American investors a casino license.

Michael Church had quit Thomas's cabinet in 2010 after he was demoted.

Fighting in the incumbent NDC prompted the party chairman, a group of elders and Cabinet members to accuse Thomas of dividing his own party.

But, at least one minister, Sylvester Quarless, who holds the social affairs portfolio, had publicly stated his intention to vote against the motion.

"I am an NDC, and I will stick with my party and with the prime minister and so on. That's where it is," said Quarless, MP for the rural St. Andrew's Southwest, whom Noel also alleged was among those plotting to remove Thomas.

"There is no question as to which way I would vote. I haven't even given it a second thought. I will be in parliament, and I will be on the side of my government," Quarless added.

A recent poll conducted by regional pollster Peter Wickham indicated that the NDC would not win the next election under Thomas's leadership.

Wickham said the rank-and-file membership of the NDC has lost confidence in their leader and that he should step down to avoid a humiliating exit from the political arena.

But Thomas insisted that his government was intact, adding that he was not worried about political uncertainties.

"If anything happens this is a democratic society," he said before the no confidence vote.

"There are processes and procedures we have to follow, based on what develops," he added. "So I don't think I have anything to worry about."

Haiti appoints a new government

By Nelson A. King

Haiti on May 14 commemorated the end of the first year in office of President Michel Martelly by ushering in a new government.

Lawmakers in the Lower Chamber of Deputies voted 70 to six, with three abstentions, in favor of new Prime Minister Laurent Lamothe's political program.

"This vote is historic," said Lamothe, urging legislators to join him in helping to transform the impoverished, French-speaking Caribbean country.

Lamothe also stressed investments in social programs, stating that it is time to lift Haiti's 10 million nationals "out of misery, out of hunger."

The May 14 vote was the final step in the four-vote ratification process, ending nearly three months of a political turmoil created with the resignation of former Prime Minister Garry Conille after only four months in office.

Lamothe is Martelly's fourth nominee for prime minister and only the second to be ratified by Haiti's parliament.

Martelly commemorated the end of his first year in office by relighting the "eternal flame" of the monument of the "Unknown Slave" in Port-au-Prince, the Haitian capital, and laying a wreath at the feet of the bronze statue.

The statue, directly across from the National Palace, was commissioned by former President Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, symbolizing Haiti's slave revolt.

Martelly said the flame, like the statue, symbolizes the rebirth of Haiti.

But former soldiers on Monday called on Martelly to honor promises to reinstate the earthquake-ravaged disbanded army.

"We are ready to fight," Jean Fednel Lafalaise, who spent 10 years on active duty in Haiti's armed forces, told reporters.

"We are in a battle for a normal cause. We are battling for a noble cause, a constitutional cause, a cause that is legal," he added.

Lafalaise said the former soldiers were prepared to take to the streets on May 18, Haitian Flag Day.

He said they want a meeting with new minister of defense, former Senate President Rodolphe Joazile.

But Joazile has said he will not meet with the former soldiers until all of the military bases are evacuated.

Our failing education system

To The Editor:

I am a guidance counselor at one of the 24 New York City schools unjustly slated for closure at the end of the school year. We are very frustrated with the censorship on this topic. There is only one perspective being perpetuated in the media on every channel except NY1. Newspaper articles are repeating the facts of the case from the perspective of the DOE. When mentioning the hundreds of thousands in opposition, the commentary stops at just that. "Teachers are upset" or "the UFT is upset" or "Students are protesting", etc... No one is pointing out the obvious.

Twenty-four schools, four distinct boroughs, 24 distinct bodies of students in need of extra support in immigrant and minority neighborhoods, 1000's of talented and dedicated educators and ONE FAILING SYSTEM. There are two things that they all have in common: The DOE's failed policies and the demographic of students. You do the math.

What has happened to democracy in NYC? Local and state politicians across the state are up in arms. The borough representatives, the community, students and parents. No real commentary on that from the media. All they hear is Bloomberg and his puppets saying, teachers are failing students, the UFT is mad.

No mention of the city's ineffective

Same-gender partnerships and President Obama's support

To The Editor:

The following is LGBT Faith Leaders of African Descent's response to President Barack Obama's public statement in support of same sex marriage:

"As the public battle over President Obama's public statement in support of same sex marriage unfolds, we find that the box is open.

The veil of "Don't ask, don't tell" is lifted. Clergy and congregations have revealed who they really are and have exposed the authentic truths about their feelings and beliefs.

We, as same-gender loving people, have sat in our houses of worship and silently heard messages of condemnation. Others have taken a defense of their pastor with the words: "I know that my pastor does not approve of my lifestyle but he never says anything hateful in his sermons." Now, the box is open and the truth is revealed.

My concern is for the young people and the children sitting in those pews that now get the message loud and clear, "You are not a child of God, but you are an abomination!"

The message is not confined to the status of marriage; it becomes extended and the message is more deadly.

What do these children now believe about themselves? Are we to hear of more trauma, bullying and possibly suicides?

I ask our clergy to think of the consequences of their public statements. The story is not only of denying equal rights, but it makes the story of the civil rights the personal property of one group of people. Justice and equal rights belong to all people, but especially to those that have been disadvantaged and excluded from equal protections. Our understanding of our basic constitutional pledge of equality for all people is under attack. When we can legislate into our Constitution clauses that undermine the rights of all people, our future is in danger... not just the future of same-gender-loving people ... but the future wellbeing of all of us.

Op-Ed

Exports from hell

By Bruce Ferguson

Anyone who has witnessed the coal extraction process known as mountaintop removal (MTR) has been shocked. The name is perfectly descriptive—tops of mountains are blasted away and bulldozed into valleys to expose underlying coal seams that can be cheaply and efficiently extracted. MTR is violence and destruction on a scale we associate with war, not industrial activity.

As in any war, there are lots of explosions—every day in central Appalachia thousands of tons of high explosives are detonated. And there are casualties—dozens of people have been killed by floods, mudslides, and overloaded coal trucks. One three-year-old boy was crushed in his bed when a boulder from an MTR site crashed through his home as he lay sleeping. The mining company called the death an "act of God" and paid a $15,000 fine for illegally operating the equipment that dislodged the boulder.

These are the obvious casualties. It's much harder to count the number of premature deaths from cancer, kidney failure, liver failure and birth defects caused by breathing the polluted air and drinking the contaminated water that are the natural byproducts of MTR.

By the end of this 2012, it's estimated that more than 1,200 square miles of Appalachian forests will have been wiped out by MTR—that's an area the size of the state of Rhode Island. The impact on human health, biodiversity, air, and water quality is so extreme that you have to assume that the U.S. is permitting MTR only because we simply cannot keep our utilities and factories running without it. But in fact, the acceleration of MTR over the past two decades has accompanied a robust coal export market that has expanded rapidly in the past five years. It turns out that we are destroying entire regions of our country to meet the energy demands of other nations. Welcome to America, the new third world.

It's astonishing that the tragedy of MTR continues to be ignored by our political leaders and the press. If more than a thousand square miles of America had been laid waste by a foreign enemy, or some cataclysmic act of nature, it would be the media story of the century. But coal corporations are systematically obliterating central Appalachia, and it's as if the destruction is invisible, or is happening somewhere else, not in our own backyard.

Now, rather than moving to stem MTR, the U.S. is about to embark on another ruinous enterprise, one that will also pollute the air, poison drinking water, and may trigger an unprecedented health crisis. And once again, it's all about exports. That is to say, it's all about money.

High-volume hydraulic fracturing (HVHF, or fracking) is a relatively new technology first tested in the Barnett Shale fields of North Texas in the late 1990s. The basic principle is simple—and frightening. Inject millions of gallons of toxic fluids underground and create enough pressure to pulverize the rock that contains the deposits of oil or gas. In MTR, the rock is smashed in the open air; in HVHF, it's smashed thousands of feet below the surface.

The underground injection of vast quantities of toxic fluid has obvious risks, and HVHF has already been linked to over a thousand instances of water contamination around the nation. A peer-reviewed scientific study has shown that the extraction and transmission of shale gas releases so much methane into the atmosphere that it actually has a greater greenhouse emissions footprint than coal. Another peer-reviewed study has shown drinking water wells near shale gas wells are seventeen times more likely to be contaminated with methane than other wells in the area.

The industry is waving the flag of energy independence to get Americans to overlook the risks and buy into fracking, but the rush to produce shale gas has little to do with domestic energy needs. At the same time, the industry is sounding patriotic themes, it is also planning to build the infrastructure that will allow it to ship huge quantities of shale gas to overseas markets, where it will command prices that are five, or six, or seven times higher than they are here at home.

In a few years the U.S. will go from being an importer of natural gas to being a major exporter. In fact, we may end up exporting shale gas to countries, such as France, that have decided that fracking is much too risky to be permitted. But France doesn't have to worry, it can always protect public health and its environment by relying on shale gas from that sacrificial energy colony across the Atlantic—the United States of America.

Obama, bin Laden and Mitt Romney

By Sheldon Richman

The partisan squabbling over the killing of Osama bin Laden is a typical election-year distraction, effectively squelching discussion of more important matters one year after the execution of the al-Qaeda chief executive.

Aided by cable-TV talking heads, Americans are spending too much time speculating over whether presumptive Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney would have given the order to get bin Laden, and also issuing paeans to President Obama's "courage." (We have a strange notion of courage. Did Obama risk his own life? Of course not. He was safe in the White House Situation Room. Perhaps he "risked" his political career, but even that isn't certain. A failed operation might have won him sympathy for a good try. On the other hand, the men under his command were ordered to risk their lives and the lives of others.)

While the commentators are engaged in trivialities, big foreign-policy questions are ignored.

For instance, although bin Laden is dead, his strategy of sucking the United States into bloody, expensive imperial wars in the Muslim world has worked like a charm. In a video released in 2004, bin Laden said, "We are continuing this policy in bleeding America to the point of bankruptcy. Allah willing, and nothing is too great for Allah." He compared what was happening in Afghanistan then to the previous Soviet debacle there. "We, alongside the mujahideen, bled Russia for 10 years until it went bankrupt and was forced to withdraw in defeat."

Viewpoint

Ironically, President Jimmy Carter's national-security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, has bragged that he helped draw the Soviet Union into Afghanistan in 1979 precisely to mire the Russians in their own "Vietnam." That experience failed to deter President George W. Bush from blindly following in the Soviets' footsteps; nor did it keep Obama from redoubling this futile effort, including a major expansion of drone attacks in Pakistan, which have killed at least 1,400 people since Obama took office. The U.S. government has been fighting the same people it helped fight the Soviets.

"All that we have to do is to send two mujahedeen to the furthest point east to raise a piece of cloth on which is written al Qaeda, in order to make generals race there to cause America to suffer human, economic and political losses without their achieving anything of note other than some benefits for their private corporations," bin Laden said.

Right he was. The Obama administration ruthlessly drone-bombs Yemen and Somalia to eradicate the "threat" from real or potential al-Qaeda affiliates in those countries. Even American officials are aware that this policy creates anti-American militants. This is not rocket science. Bomb people, and they will dislike you — and perhaps seek revenge.

Bin Laden got his wish. America's fiscal house couldn't be more disorderly. The debt is over $15 trillion, larger than the GDP. The Congressional Research Service says that from 2001 to 2011 the Afghan war cost $443 billion. Tens of thousands of civilians have been killed, and many more maimed. American deaths total more than 1,800, with well over 15,000 wounded. The number of survivors whose lives have been effectively destroyed is uncountable. And that leaves the Iraq war out of the account. Al-Qaeda wasn't even in that country until George W. Bush invaded in 2003.

The point is that we let bin Laden take our eyes off the ball. He and al-Qaeda were creatures of American policy, though not in the sense that U.S. agents funded him or set up his organization. Rather, he turned his wrath toward America (and away from U.S.-backed Middle Eastern oppressors) as it became apparent that so much of the misery inflicted on the Muslim world had its origins in Washington, D.C.

The sources of misery include the decade-long economic sanctions on Iraq, which killed half a million children — a price pronounced "worth it" in 1996 by President Clinton's then-UN ambassador and later secretary of state Madeleine Albright; the stationing of U.S. troops near holy places in Saudi Arabia; and the continuing subjugation of Palestinians by U.S.-backed Israel. In the absence of those and related policies, bin Laden would have had no interest in seeing U.S. territory attacked.

To be sure, bin Laden is gone. But the abominable foreign policy goes on.

Justice for Black farmers realized

By Ralph Paige

The 180-day period for monetary claims by Black farmers against the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) expired on May 11.

When these farmers filed their class-action lawsuit in the mid-1990s (Pigford vs. Glickman), they were but acting on what had been known for decades. Namely, that Blacks had always been systematically discriminated against by the USDA.

The history has been bleak. When Congress created the USDA's Farmers Home Administration in 1942, it was supposed to be the "lending institution of last resort" for farmers. It was created to save America's family farmers as they struggled after the devastating 1930's depression. But Black farmers then and up to now have never been able to access the loans and other program services at the USDA in an equitable fashion. In fact, in 1982 the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights reported that the primary reason Blacks had lost land was because of the USDA itself and lack of services.

In the USDA regulations, in fact, it states that the USDA offices are supposed provide loan applications and assistance to farmers in filling out the applications. The USDA is supposed to offer loan servicing advice and opportunities for farmers who are having trouble making their payments. If approved for a loan, the payments are supposed to be provided in a timely fashion. These are just some examples.

For Black farmers, however, in most instances the USDA office would not even provide a loan application. And if the farmer did receive an application and was approved for a loan, in many instances the loan came too late to plant that year's crop. Black farmers were also in many instances given a "supervised account" where they did not receive the money outright but were required to go to the USDA for the loan officer or supervisor to write the check for supplies, etc.

The consequences of all of this has been costly for Black farmers because invariably they would have to get loans from supply houses or banks at exceptionally high interest rates or they went without and sought other jobs to make a living. Often land was lost and marriages destroyed.

A settlement agreement for the class action lawsuit was approved on April 14, 1999, and the deadline for submitting a claim as a class member was October 12, 1999.

Because it became clear that many Blacks were not aware of the settlement, on July 14, 2000 Judge Paul Friedman in the U.S. District Court ruled that individuals could file a petition explaining why they missed the 1999 deadline. Close to 90,000 individuals filed a late petition up until June 18, 2008.

Further, thanks to the Congressional Black Caucus a provision was inserted in the 2008 Farm Bill permitting individuals who had submitted a late-filing request under Pigford to submit a claim form. This portion of lawsuit for the "late" claimants became known as Pigford II.

Thankfully, in November 2010, Congress appropriated $1.25 billion for those Pigford II claims.

Like the original Pigford case, the Pigford II settlement provides both a fast-track settlement process and higher payments to potential claimants who go through a more rigorous review and documentation process. A moratorium on foreclosures of most claimants' farms will remain in place until after claimants have gone through the claims process.

In some states, there are meetings being held suggesting, unfortunately, that it's still possible to get into this lawsuit. This has led to considerable misinformation circulating around the South about who is entitled to seek an award. One thing's for sure: No one should have to pay money to be part of the Pigford lawsuit. Class counsel lawyers will help fill out claims at no cost. There is also assistance from community advocates, like the staff of the Federation of Southern Cooperatives/Land Assistance Fund and other farmers' groups in the Network of Black Farm Groups and Advocates.

Many original claimants are now deceased. There are provisions in the settlement for their next of kin or heirs to file a claim on their behalf. Persons filing on behalf of a deceased relative must furnish a death certificate for the claimant and must know the details and circumstances of their farming operation and USDA loan or non-loan program denial.

As there is a finite sum of money for the settlement, which has to be used to pay all legal, notice and administrative expenses, as well as pay the farmers, the judge has ruled that no funds for successful claims will be distributed until after the claims period and the evaluation of all claims. This means that funds won't be distributed until late 2010 or early 2013.

If you're an African-American farmer and have questions about whether you're in the lawsuit, call EPIQ, the lawsuit administrator, at 877-810-8110.

For years African-American farmers were denied access to USDA funds and services. Now we have an opportunity to correct this wrong.

Paige is executive director of the Federation of Southern Cooperative/Land Assistance Fund.

De Blasio to City Hall: Don't privatize parking meters

Ed Note:

In a letter to Mayor Bloomberg, Public Advocate Bill de Blasio warned that privatizing the City's 40,000 parking meters could lead to higher parking costs and wasted taxpayer dollars. De Blasio called on the Mayor to halt privatization plans announced earlier this week, citing Chicago's costly experience.

The full letter follows:

Dear Mayor Bloomberg:

I write to oppose your Administration's plan to privatize nearly 40,000 parking meters across New York City. As we have seen in cities like Chicago, privatization can lead to higher costs for drivers and small business owners at a time when they can ill afford it. The pitfalls of this proposal far outweigh its benefits—and we must prevent it from advancing any further.

Privatization risks exposing out small businesses and residents to:

Higher Costs: I am particularly concerned by your Administration's refusal to come clean about potential rate hikes accompanying privatization. Given the experiences of cities across the country, struggling business owners and residents in New York have every right to worry about higher costs—and no reason to trust in the current process to protect their interests.

Disruption and Waste: Given the City's poor track record with CityTime, the overhaul of 911, NYCHA's "NICE" computer software and malfunctioning water meter readers, I fear that the ill-considered roll-out of yet another new technology could lead to significant disruption and spiraling costs for taxpayers. Current oversight of these projects is simply not sufficient.

Loss of Accountability: Ceding authority over parking spaces and meters to a private company would place a matter of City policy into the hands of a private company, and reduce the system's accountability to the people who use our streets every day. If achieving better performance from our streets and parking are the objectives—and they should be—privatization is not the way to achieve them.

Our streets are not assets to be sold, nor are parking spaces simply a revenue tool. They are an essential public good that millions of New Yorkers rely upon. I urge you to halt this process now, before walking any further down the path of privatization.

Sincerely,
Bill de Blasio
Public Advocate

Asthma sufferers: Get informed!

If you're one of the estimated 25 million Americans who suffer from asthma, you know what it's like to experience symptoms such as coughing, wheezing and shortness of breath. To raise awareness and understanding of this serious and growing health problem, Novartis Pharmaceuticals Corporation and Genentech have joined with the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America (AAFA) to launch The Asthma Express, an educational awareness program to help bring allergic asthma to the forefront.

The program highlights the increasing number of people suffering from the disease and how it affects them. The program encourages people to get screened to help determine if their asthma is uncontrolled and to talk with an asthma specialist, like an allergist or pulmonologist, about their results and if they should be screened for allergic asthma. The Asthma Express is stopping in selected cities across the U.S., educating people at community health fairs about asthma, allergic asthma and some available testing options.

In each city, the educational experience features:

- Interactive iPad stations where people can learn more about allergic asthma.

- Free testing options to see if your asthma is uncontrolled and if allergens may play a role in your asthma.

- A take home educational kit to help people talk with their healthcare provider about the disease.

Many things can trigger or worsen asthma symptoms, leading to uncontrolled asthma that may vary and recur over time. Of the different types of asthma, allergic asthma is the most common form affecting approximately 60 percent of all asthma sufferers in the U.S. Allergic asthma is caused by sensitivity to year-round allergens in the air that trigger an allergic reaction that can lead to asthma attacks and symptoms. It is also associated with IgE, a type of antibody responsible for most allergic reactions. Typically your healthcare provider will use a skin or blood test to see if your asthma is caused by allergens in the air.

"It is important to understand what could trigger your allergic asthma to help better control your disease," says Dr. Travis Stork, ER doctor and host of the Emmy award-winning talk show "The Doctors." "Many people living with asthma and allergic asthma have triggers. Identifying your triggers can help you work with your doctor to determine the most appropriate course of action. The one thing I always tell patients: 'Empower yourself.' When it comes to asthma, find out if your asthma is allergic asthma."

Only your healthcare provider can tell you if you have allergic asthma. Be sure to talk to your doctor.

To find out more about allergic asthma and when The Asthma Express may be coming to a city near you, visit www.AsthmaExpress.com.

Dr. Stork is being compensated for his participation in this educational campaign, which is sponsored by Genentech and Novartis Pharmaceuticals Corporation.

Tips for women to prevent common health problems

You may not realize it, but your lifestyle could be putting you at risk for common health problems that afflict women. National Women's Health Week, observed May 13-19, is a great reminder to brush up on some facts that can help you stay healthy.

Breast Cancer

The causes of breast cancer are complicated, but some significant risk factors are preventable. Obesity is one such risk, and even moderate weight loss helps protect you. Cutting down on alcohol will also improve your chances of staying breast cancer-free.

It's impossible to eliminate your risk entirely, but early detection will improve your prognosis. Conduct regular self-breast examinations and let your doctor know if you detect anything unusual. Follow the National Cancer Institute guidelines and get a mammogram annually when you turn 40.

Toxic Shock Syndrome

You may regard Toxic Shock Syndrome (TSS) as rare, but one in 700 women will experience tampon-related TSS, according to You ARE Loved, a non-profit working to educate girls and women about the disease. TSS is a bacterial infection characterized by sudden high fever, diarrhea, rash, muscle aches and headache. You can significantly reduce your risk of this life-threatening disease with a trip to the drug store.

"Historically, tampon use has been linked to half of all TSS cases, so simply switching to a safer product is a terrific safeguard against this disease," says Dr. Christine Ko, an expert in women's health.

You likely are familiar with pads, but there are alternatives you may find more convenient. For example, Softcup is a flexible cup worn internally around your cervix. It's hypo-allergenic, latex-free and has never been linked to TSS. There's an added benefit too: products like Softcup can be worn for up to 12 hours and don't leave behind the residual fibers and traces of bleach, dioxins and other residues that tampons can. It won't change your body's natural pH or bacteria levels either, reducing your risk for infections.

More information on reducing TSS risk can be found at www.softcup.com.

Heart Disease

Many people think heart disease is an exclusively male risk. But women also need to protect their hearts. While severe chest pain is a symptom often associated with heart disease in men, women need to watch for different signs. Talk to your doctor immediately if you experience neck and shoulder pain, dizziness, fatigue and sweating.

You're never too young to take steps to prevent heart disease, particularly if it runs in your family. You can keep your heart healthier by reducing saturated fat, cholesterol and salt in your diet, and getting regular exercise.

While depression and smoking can adversely affect anyone's heart, The Mayo Clinic reports these risk factors are greater in women. So cut out cigarettes and take steps to treat mental stress right away.

Doctor, Doctor Questions Often Asked

By Herbert Okun, M.D.

Swelling of the feet and legs

Most people, when they notice swelling of their feet and legs are keenly aware that something is wrong. The problem is that there are so many medical conditions that can result in such swelling, the average person is at a loss to understand the specific cause of their problem. Often the first thing that comes to mind is the salt content of the food they ate at the Chinese restaurant the night before.

Leg swelling is a fairly common symptom of both heart or kidney failure, which can be considered central causes as opposed to local causes, such as venous insufficiency of the legs, where, the swelling is limited only to the legs and feet. In other words, the mechanism is local and not central. With venous insufficiency, the edema decreases by the morning, but does not move elsewhere.

Diuretics (water pills) are often mistakenly prescribed for the treatment of edema of venous insufficiency. The mistake is that in venous insufficiency, there is not an excessive amount of water trapped in the body, such as might occur in cardiac or renal failure, but rather an abnormal distribution of a normal amount of water due to leaking venous valves.

A third type of edema, fortunately rare but often confused with the edema of venous insufficiency of the legs is lymphedema. Lymphedema is retention of lymphatic fluid in the soft tissue. To understand this, you must first be aware that arteries and veins are not the only fluid carrying conduits or vessels in our bodies.

There is another complete system of conduits known as the lymphatic system. If you could measure all the arterial blood pumped into the legs over the course of a day and at the same time, measure all of the venous blood being returned from the legs during that same day, you would find that the volume of the blood being pumped into the legs daily through the arteries was greater than the volume of blood being returned through the veins. The reason the legs don't inflate like balloons is because the extra fluid, known as lymph is constantly being drawn off by the lymphatic system. This complex system of lymphatic vessels passes through many lymph nodes and ends up re-depositing the lymphatic fluid into the venous system high in the chest close to the heart.

Obstructions to the flow of lymph may occur as a result of scarification from surgery, radiation, cancerous obstruction to lymph nodes, and vascular injuries. Further there is another broad group of people who suffer with leg swelling related to a lack of protein, specifically albumin in the blood. This is by no means a complete description of all the conditions that can cause swelling of the legs. Should your legs become swollen, see your doctor for guidance as to the best way to proceed.

Free training for entrepreneurs

By Tequila Minsky

Jessie Lee is the director of Small Business Services, a program of Brooklyn-based CAMBA, a multi-service non-profit agency. The Business program offers free business training and counsel to the community.

This division sees 2000 individuals a year, helping them start businesses that range from food-based, to childcare, to retail products, to services (like photography and graphic arts). CAMBA serves primarily low-income, minority persons and women.

Often, those that come to CAMBA have difficulty getting a living-wage job because they may have children at home or struggle with English. Many who turn to the program have a good skill or an idea, and they say, "I want to be my own boss."

"One of the biggest issues for a potential business," Lee explains, "is targeting your market, knowing and finding your niche. For example, you might have a product, a tee shirt that lights up at night." Lee asks, "but who are you going to sell this to?" She mentioned that a number of other good ideas come through the door with out planning how to market the item. CAMBA helps all kinds of businesses.

It's not just about having a good idea. Says Lee, "A business is more than just a good idea. It takes management."

Lee recommends seeking business counseling before putting your savings into the business idea. An experienced business counselor can guide you through the business process.

And where do you find a business counselor? CAMBA has three counselors in its economic development division.

Counseling services are also available at the SBA (Small Business Administration—a federal government program) (archive.sba.gov/services/counseling/index.html) and the New York State Business Development Center (www.nyssbdc.org/). The organization SCORE provides free local mentoring from experienced "older" business people who volunteer their time (www.score.org).

CAMBA's free start-up workshop series includes business basics (and choosing a business legal structure), planning that gets funding, marketing, access to capital, credit repair, how to start and operate a home based business and how to become a licensed childcare provider.

Each course is offered every month.

Business practices the novice might be unaware of are how to create a profit/loss (cash flow) statement or which necessary business licenses are needed (e.g. business registration or incorporation).

Its three-session series offered each month called "entrepreneurial finance module"—the beginner, learning Basic Excel spreadsheets, or intermediate level—is intended for existing or startup businesses with a need to develop, manage and understand basic financial statements. Skills learned at these sessions are essential if applying for a loan.

Also, the third Thursday of every month, CAMBA offers a two-hour course in writing a business plan.

Lee says that a high percentage of CAMBA's small business clients turn to them only after problems arise "when they need help and want to revamp the business" and often when it's too late to rescue the business.

One successful, but challenging client was a woman who had started a business making party favors. She had a small store and taught classes. When the economy plummeted, her retail business followed suit.

By the time she came to CAMBA, she was two months overdue on rent and facing possible eviction.

CAMBA encouraged her to put the retail on hold, give up the physical store and concentrate on giving classes, which required little overhead. CAMBA enrolled her in its social media business courses and taught her how to market her classes online -- thus lowering her marketing expenses and growing her teaching income.

She is now getting back on her business back on its feet.

CAMBA works closely with local banks, and many referrals come through the banks' small business services, typically when a bank client can't qualify for a conventional loan. CAMBA will work with the clients to create business plans, and then provide small loans.

Succeeding in business, starting and running a small business, takes hard work, planning and a strong knowledge of the nuts and bolts of solid business practices.

CAMBA's Small Business Services programs aim at helping individuals start and manage their own businesses. For more info: 718-282-2500, <http://www.CAMBA.org> has been demanding the full payment, arguing that Grenada, which a few years ago dumped Taiwan in favor of China, defaulted on the loans.

Taiwan has been successful in a United States court to get companies operating withhold the payments of fees to the statutory bodies. However, Grenada contends that the ruling is illegal since the statutory bodies operate independent of the Central government.

Guyana

Guyana is looking to assist cash-strapped low-cost carrier REDjet.

REDjet's Chief Executive Officer Ian Burns met recently with Guyana's Ministry of Public Works and Transport and the Ministry of Tourism to discuss financial assistance to get back into the air.

REDjet's proposals are now on the desk of President Donald Ramoutar.

While acting Tourism

Minister Irfaan Ali declined to comment on how much money the Barbados-based airline has requested, he confirmed that their recommendations would be engaging the attention of Cabinet.

Ali said that government officials had indicated that the issue of the airline not having a valid Air Operator's Certificate also needed a resolution.

The certificate was suspended by the Barbados Civil Aviation Department recently following the March 16 suspension of services announcement.

Jamaica

In a statement, Caribbean Airlines Ltd. (CAL) said it informed the Jamaican Airline Pilots Association and the pilot body of its intention to offer contracts of employment with CAL.

"The employment of the pilots to CAL will see the company using a transparent process to ensure a smooth and seamless transition. All benefits remained unchanged," it said.

CAL's acting chief executive offer Robert Corbie said the pilots will be offered contracts under CAL, but it was too early to say if all 55 would apply for the jobs.

Jamaica

Human rights lobby group Jamaica for Justice (JJJ) was joined recently by other civic organizations to stage a peaceful protest outside the Ministry of National Security to bring attention to the increasing number of police killings this year.

Since the start of the year 47 civilians have been killed by members of the Jamaican Constabulary Force.

The latest victim was a 16-year-old Immaculate High School student Vanessa Kirkland. She was shot and killed in what police claim was a confrontation with criminals. However, residents say Vanessa and four friends were on their way to a party in Greenwich Farm when police opened fire on the vehicle.

Jamaica

Police in Jamaica have arrested six persons accused of stealing tens of thousands of dollars from U.S. citizens through a lottery scam.

Investigators said in a statement that one of the men had more than US$60,000 in an account believed to belong to the victims. Police also seized computers, information on the lottery scam and lists of U.S. victims with their addresses and other personal information.

The arrest came after police contacted a U.S. victim they say lost $120,000 through the scam.

Jamaica has long operated as a center for international telemarketing frauds that target elderly Americans and rake in more than US$300 million a year.

St. Lucia

A St. Lucian boutique

hotelier has made an Earth Day appeal to the Caribbean to lead the world in climate-friendly practices and attract more visitors because of it.

Eroline Lamontagne, general manager of Fond Doux Holiday Plantation, a restored plantation house in Soufriere, said in statement to mark the global environmental awareness day recently that environmental protection and conservation were not only imperative for the Caribbean, but also made "very good" business sense.

Lamontagne recalled the 1994 United Nations Global Conference on Small Island Developing States (SIDS) in Barbados when the international community examined the specific needs of small islands on the frontline of climate change impacts from sea level to natural disasters.

"The Barbados Program of Action, agreed by the countries of the world at that conference should be our Bible," said Lamontagne, urging Caribbean hotels to "use Earth Day to highlight what sustainable programs they initiated or enhanced during the year.

She said Fond Doux Holiday Plantation, which carried a Green Globe certification as an environmental friendly tourism plant, "adheres closely to the spirit of eco-building and cultural preservation."

St. Vincent

St. Vincent and the Grenadines opposition senator, Anesia Baptiste has confirmed that the leader of the opposition New Democratic Party (NDP) Anhim Eustace, has revoked her senatorial appointment.

"He called in to Nice Radio and read a letter that he had sent to the governor general to that effect. He also indicated that he will say more on Nice Radio," Baptiste said.

Baptiste said she has decided to wait on Eustace's comments before she makes any public statement on the matter.

Unified takes over U.S. Window Factory....

We were all very proud to announce that we took over the U.S. Window Factory location at 130-11 Atlantic Ave. Richmond Hill. For the past 25 years, U.S. Window Factory manufactured windows and doors for residential and commercial use in Queens and South Carolina. At the companies height, they sold and installed $25 million a year in products. As U.S. Window was winding down all their operations, we at Unified stepped in to help complete some jobs sold by U.S. Windows to prevent those customers from losing their deposits.

The location is currently being converted for use as our fifth location so that all of our products can be displayed. Since Unified sells windows, doors, siding, roofing, stone work, attic insulation and awnings, there is quite a bit of work to be done but the doors were opened on April 1st, nonetheless.

Having been in business since 1989, our entire office staff of more than 50 employees and our approximately 60 installers have helped to make our company one of the largest and fastest growing companies of its kind in the Tri-State region. With over 150 jobs being completed each week, we are also quite proud of our A+ rating with the Better Business Bureau.

I think our credentials also speak volumes:

- US Department of Energy, Energy Star Partner
- National Grid Authorized Weatherization Contractor
- Building Performance Institute BPI Certified Licensed Home Analyst
- GAF Building Materials Roofing Installation Authorized Installer
- Owens Corning Platinum Preferred Roofing Contractor, Top of the House Contractor Certified in Roofing, Insulation and Ventilation

Dr. Steven C. Tawil: Colon Cancer Screening & Prevention

By Camille Sperrazza

Stop postponing your colonoscopy.

Everyone age 50 and over needs one, but African-Americans are at an especially high risk of developing colon cancer, says Dr. Steven C. Tawil, gastroenterologist and internist.

"It is recommended that they be screened for colon cancer at age 45," says the doctor.

The reasons the mortality rate is higher for African-Americans is not known, says Dr. Tawil, but the good news is that having this simple procedure "can improve the numbers."

It has never been easier or more convenient to undergo this procedure. It can be done right in Dr. Tawil's Brighton Beach office, with an anesthesiologist present.

"This means it is an 100 percent painless procedure," says the doctor.

The administration of the anesthesia is quick, so patients feel no pain, he assures. The presence of the anesthesiologist also means that a patient's vital signs are constantly being monitored.

"It's another pair of hands in the room, another doctor checking oxygen, heart rhythms, and pulse," says Dr. Tawil. "It's all about the comfort and safety of the patient."

Dr. Tawil's office is recognized by the American Association for Accreditation of Ambulatory Surgery. Facilities accredited by this organization must meet rigorous standards of cleanliness and other criteria that assures the highest standards, says the doctor. This feat is not an easy achievement, and he takes pride that his practice is held in such high esteem.

The Brighton Beach Avenue facility, at the same location since 1991, recently moved from the second floor to the third floor, securing a new 6,000 square foot office. Among the highlights is an endoscopy suite with a private changing room, a recovery room, and a private bathroom in the recovery room. Such a set-up makes screening easy for the patient, as there's no running down a hall to find a toilet. Everything is convenient and private.

Make an appointment to see him if you have rectal bleeding. This could be a sign of colon cancer, and should never be ignored, says the doctor. A change in bowel habits or unexplained weight loss are other reasons to undergo an exam. If there is a history of polyps in the family, being screened is a must, he says. Polyps are small growths that occur on the wall of the colon, and if they are not removed, some may eventually turn into cancer, says Dr. Tawil. The removal of polyps can be done right after the colonoscopy is performed, while the patient is still under anesthesia. That way, patients don't have to return to get another procedure.

Patients can also come to him to get their blood pressure checked and their sugar levels monitored. He also treats heartburn, ulcers, constipation, liver issues, and stomach ailments. He specializes in the treatment of hepatitis, particularly hepatitis C.

"We have the latest treatment, available right in the office," he says.

Dr. Tawil's credentials are impeccable. He is board-certified in internal medicine and gastroenterology, which means a "double certification," he notes. In addition, he is re-certified every 10 years, which involves undergoing a seven-hour test. It all proves he is at the top of his game, aware of the most recent developments in the field.

A graduate of Syracuse University, Dr. Tawil trained at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine for five years. He is on staff at the New York Methodist Hospital, and is a member of the American College of Physicians; the New York State Medical Society; the American Medical Association; and the American College of Gastroenterology.

The office accepts most major health plans, including Medicare and Medicaid. For the convenience of his hard-working patients, the office is now open on Sundays. It is handicapped accessible, and convenient to bus and trains. The doctor sees patients by appointment.

Dr. Tawil [130 Brighton Beach Ave. between Ocean Parkway and Coney Island Avenue in Brighton Beach, (718) 946-7557]. Open Sundays, 9 am to 1 pm; Mondays, 9 am to 4:30 pm; and Wednesdays, 9 am to 6:30 pm. Procedures are performed on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Omega Chi celebrates National Nurses Week

By Donna Lamb

On May 11, the Omega Chi Chapter of Chi Eta Phi Sorority, a national sorority of registered nurses and nursing students, held its National Nurses Week celebration at Brooklyn's highly respected Dr. Susan Smith McKinney Nursing and Rehabilitation Center (DSSM).

The gala, which was emceed by Patricia Baptiste, began with welcoming remarks by Karen McNeil, followed by an invocation by Dr. Audrey Sealey-Dupree.

In her greetings on behalf of DSSM, Executive Director Peola Small emphasized the fact that nurses play a pivotal role in the center's effort to provide quality care to its residents because the nurses are closest to them on a daily basis.

State Senator Eric Adams was also on hand to congratulate Omega Chi members on their unwavering dedication to their motto "Service for Humanity."

The evening's featured speaker was Grenadian-born DSSM Assistant Medical Director Dr. Lucia Nixon. With great charm, warmth, and humor, she told of how two nurses really saved her bacon on her first night shift, when she was an inexperienced intern, trying to appear confident but petitioning the Gods for an uneventful night.

Realizing Dr. Nixon's incompetence, two nurses on duty who were supremely experienced and confident took charge of the situation, retrieving the medication and directing her on what to do.

"Actually, the nurse administered the medication while I merely held the patient's hand," Dr. Nixon declared. "After the patient was stabilized, they even handed her the doctor's order and instructed her what to write."

The Member of Year Award went to Pearline Okumakpeyi, Omega Chi's immediate past president and one of its most senior members, who, despite her many family commitments and graduate school studies, always finds time to commit to the sorority.

Carol Walkin received the Unsung Hero Award. An active member of the chapter for over five years, she is always one of the first members to be called upon to assist when needed, and she does so without hesitation or fanfare.

Other highlights of the evening were two beautiful gospel solos by

Bernadette St. Clair and a special dedication to the nurses by vocalist Angela Cooper who stirred and inspired everyone with her gorgeous rendition of "Go Light Your World" with its chorus of "Carry your candle, run to the darkness" which everyone joined in on while holding up their candles.

Closing remarks were delivered by Phyllis Payne Dublin who told the nurses to go forth knowing that "the light we shine may not necessarily be a candle but our smiles, our touch, and our voices that can mean so much to those in our care, bringing them strength."

The evening concluded with delicious refreshments, which were enjoyed by all along with the enlivening music provided by deejay Jerry Gabriel.

Awards for New York steel band pioneers

By Chudi Chukwudi

Two surviving members from a three-piece steel band which appeared in the 1954 Broadway musical House of Flowers will be among the special lineup of individuals being honored at a Tribute to New York Steel Band Pioneers organized by the Trinidad & Tobago Folk Arts Institute, Sunday evening May 20. The gala event will be held at Tropical Paradise Ballroom, Brooklyn from 6:00 to 11:00 p.m.

Michael Alexander and Alfonso Marshall (whose name, after he subsequently became an actor, was changed to Austin Stoker) are the two surviving steelpan players from the 1954 production, which starred Pearl Bailey and was written by Truman Capote. The members of the history-making steel band unit were recruited from Trinidad by the noted Trinidad-born choreographer-director Geoffrey Holder, who was also in the House of Flowers cast.

The other honorees are Caldera Caraballo, Milton Gabriel, Edward George, Lennox Leverock, Roy Sangster and Kim Wong. Two well-known names associated with steel band activity in its early days here, Rudolph King and Conrad Mauge, will be honored posthumously. Among them, the steel band stalwarts selected for this recognition aggregated countless hours as leaders and players in the formative period of New York's steel band culture. Their experiences ran the gamut from Caldera Caraballo's touring with Harry Belafonte to Kim Wong's collaborative projects with folk music icon Pete Seeger to Rudolph King's sharing nightclub billing with calypso singer Mighty Charmer, prior to the latter becoming a household name in a different sphere as Louis Farrakan.

The idea for the tribute grew out of a panel discussion arranged by the Folk Arts Institute at Medgar Evers College which focused on the origins and early growth of the steel band culture in New York. Honorees Leverock and Sangster were participants in that exercise.

The Folk Arts Institute will also use the opportunity to present a special award to the operators of the popular When Steel Talks web site for their dedication to the steelpan music idiom and its global reach.

Included in entertainment for the evening will be guest performances by acclaimed pianist Garvin Blake and his band. Deejay music will be provided by Scobie.

policies on discipline and the joke that suspensions have become.

No mention of how difficult it is to have dangerous/disruptive and even violent students in the schools involuntarily transferred.

No mention of how the systems in place to deal with truancy have failed and the government agencies in place to address them are ineffective (ACS on Education Neglect, PINS petitions at Family Court).

No mention on how the DOE has failed to implement remediation programs at the junior high level to help to produce high school ready students.

No mention of the fact that English language acquisition may mean students take longer to graduate. We are all being rated on our four-year graduation rates but the City is not taking fairly enough into account the fact that truancy, suspensions, English Language Learners, students with disabilities, literacy level, socio-economic status, social-emotional issues, etc., are harsh realities in all these neighborhoods and that the majority of these students will need extra time to meet NYC graduation requirements.

Changing the names of the school and playing musical chairs with teachers are not going to solve the problem of low achievement. There is a happy medium out there. Fund the schools, support them, use demographics sensitive criteria to rate these schools, adjust the city's failing policies and develop a teacher evaluation method that is more accurate and thorough so that the 10 percent of low performing educators can be identified and either supported or dealt with accordingly.

This "turnaround model" is disregarding and disrespectful of the students and the relationships they have formed with their teachers, counselors, coaches, club and team leaders, mentors in their second home and in some cases, their only real sense of family. The senior and junior class of students will be thrust into the chaos and uncertainty that this "turnaround model" promises and it is not fair. This is not the time for them to be experiencing any form of uncertainty. Not with college applications, scholarship applications, SAT and ACT exams to take, letters of recommendations, guidance and mentorship through the process and even the celebration of their achievements. They deserve better consideration.

Is there anyone out there that will help us get this message across? The current problems will be perpetuated in the new schools if the city fails to address these issues. We need your help in bringing the public's attention to these issues. Our hope is to effect change in these areas. Please help.

Erectile Dysfunction? You may be at risk of a stroke or heart attack!

Did you know that the same diseases that affect the blood vessels which lead to the heart and brain also affect the delicate vessels that supply blood to the genital organs. Careful evaluation of erectile dysfunction can uncover these problems years before critical damage occurs.

According to the Male Aging Study on sexual dysfunction, Erectile Dysfunction (ED) can first emerge in a man at age 40. In addition, an estimated 30 million men in the United States are affected by ED. What causes this dreadful condition and what must one do to prevent it?

In this article, we seek advice from two award winning urologic surgeons, Dr. Vitaly Raykhman and Dr. Yuly Chalik. These two recipients of the prestigious Patient's Choice Award were also named America's Top Urologists of 2009 and 2010.

What Is Erectile Dysfunction?

Erectile dysfunction (ED) is the constant or periodic, recurring inability of a male to get or maintain an erection. An erection occurs when blood fills the chambers of the penis, causing it to expand and stiffen. This is controlled by impulses from the brain and genital nerves. Despite the fact that 95% of ED cases can be easily treated, only 10% of men seek medical attention when ED first begins.

What causes erectile dysfunction?

The root causes of ED are either physical, psychological, or hormonal. Most men experience erectile dysfunction as a result of another chronic disease, such as diabetes, or as a result of poor lifestyle choices, such as smoking, drinking, and drug abuse. 10-20% of men suffer from ED as a result of psychological factors such as stress, depression, low self-esteem, and performance anxiety. ED can also occur as a result of damaged nerves from a previous surgery or as a side-effect of your current medication.

Diagnosis

The main premise in diagnosing erectile dysfunction is determining what it is caused by, whether it is physical, psychological, or hormonal. Men who cannot get or maintain an erection at least 75% of the time are considered to have erectile dysfunction. Our advanced diagnostic capabilities include:

- Comprehensive testing for hormonal complications
- Penile blood pressure measurement
- Blood and urine analysis
- Testosterone exam
- Neurological exam

All of these tests are conducted within the pristine New York Urologic Institute. This relieves patients of the need to go back and forth between medical offices to obtain final diagnosis.

Treatment

In the last few years, there have been significant advances in medicinal therapies. At NYUI, we take advantage of a full range of cutting-edge technologies that allow our patients to live healthier and happier lives.

Therefore, we utilize medications such as Viagra, Cialis, and Levitra, which are guaranteed by the FDA to increase potency. In order to minimize the risk of undesired side effects, we urge patients who suffer from erectile dysfunction to see an experienced urologist, who will determine which medication is right for them.

If medication therapy does not produce desired effects, there is sometimes no choice other than surgery. Some patients come to our clinic seeking penile surgery, and are very satisfied with the result.

A Serious Affliction

It's well known that Erectile Dysfunction significantly lowers affected male's quality of life. Among other problems, most men agree that ED causes stress, inability to enjoy sex, and problems at work. Despite the seriousness of this affliction, many men don't choose to seek professional medical attention. It's very rare that ED goes away by itself, but it does worsen and get more difficult to treat over time.

While the onset of ED becomes more likely as you age, this does not mean getting older means the end of your sex life, since ED can be treated at any age. We advise men who have not been affected by ED to avoid smoking and drinking, and begin exercising regularly.

However, if your life has been impacted by erectile dysfunction, come visit the award-winning urologists of the New York Urologic Institute and see how we can restore your comfort and quality of life.

By Tangerine Clarke

Former United Nations sustainability specialist, humanitarian and author, Muriel Glasgow, will be honored with the Ambassador of Peace Award for her selfless contribution to peace, human rights and development with NGOs and UNICEF.

The Guyanese-American will be presented with the prestigious award at the 49th Commemoration Gala Reception and Celebration of the Organization Of African Unity (OAU)-African Culture Center - in collaboration with the African Woman of Good Governance.

The event will be held on Thursday, May 24 at the New York Academy of Medicine Conference Center, in New York City. The gala starts at 6:00 p.m.

Glasgow is multi-talented and an exceptionally brilliant individual, who has used her skills in every imaginable way to improve the lives of others. She served 30 years with UNICEF where she was responsible for implementing programs to provide clean drinking water, and hygienic and sanitation conditions in various countries like Haiti, Togo, Madagascar, Indonesia to name a few.

Glasgow focuses on education as a member of the African Renaissance and Diaspora Network, where she heads up an impressive science program for children under six years old within the (ICU) Imaginary/Innovative and Creative Unit of the organization.

She is also the founder of STEM Clubs for Kids, and co-founder of the Vihara Foundation. The UN Mentoring Program for Junior Professionals, also benefit from Glasgow's outstanding work.

A champion for several causes, Glasgow continues to energize and educate the community with her business ventures through Moringa Partners, Idea Generator, and Space, all under the umbrella of MG Associates Inc.

An articulate and well-informed communicator, Glasgow is the host and producer of "Yakker's Corner" - a blog radio show and podcast network channel that broadcast humanitarian stories and sustainable development initiatives pertaining to the goals of the United Nations.

Glasgow's elegant style of dress was parlayed into Muriella Designs - a ready to wear collection of cotton fabric creations, finished with an African batik and tie-dye motive. The eveningwear, and casual pieces are top sellers in the Tri-State area.

The Columbia University Alum, and effervescent Ms. Glasgow is affiliated with prominent organizations such as the University Peace Federation, Fashion Group International, the Law of Attraction New York Group, United Nations Women's guild South African Partnership Committee, the Annual Guyana Folk Festival and many others.

She is the recipient of the Guyana Cultural Association Award and the Certificate of Service of the United Nations Panel of Counsel among others.

Musical artist Reddaz coming on strong

by Donna Lamb

According to many music lovers, Kenwick Cayenne – AKA Redddaz – is destined to become as hot as the red pepper his last name brings to mind.

This Trinidadian American, who has performed at Jersey Carnival, as well as the Soca Monarch competition in Brooklyn, has a unique sound that is wowing crowds in clubs and at parties all over the City. His catchy rhythms are so compelling that even the most exhausted revelers find themselves pulled back onto the dance floor. His eclectic – and often very surprising – blend of musical genres energize his listeners, leaving them wanting more.

Given his background, it's no surprise that Redddaz wound up in the music industry, an artist with wide-ranging musical taste, not pinned down to any one form. The second son of Trinidadian parents, he was born and raised in Brooklyn where, even as a toddler, he was exposed to a great variety of music.

"My father was a bass player for The Mighty Sparrow, and he still plays in a band till this day," Redddaz said. "Growing up, there was always music playing in our house – soul, R&B, hip hop, dancehall, reggae, and, of course, lots of soca. Even country music was played, as well as gospel. So you can say a lot of music is floating in my head," he continued. "That's why rather than being considered a reggae/soca artist, singer, or rapper, I just call myself an artist. I don't think music should have any boundaries or limitations. I consider it more of a melting pot."

Redddaz said, too, that as a child he played the songs he heard on his keyboard and would sing other peoples songs as if they were his own. He enjoyed engaging in MC battles with other kids where they would square off against each other to see who was the best performer.

In the 6th grade, Redddaz began to write his own lyrics. That was the beginning of his learning how to compose and make his own music. Everything he does now is original; he composes his instrumentals with FL Studio and records with Sonar Cakewalk. He co-wrote a song for Beenie Man and works with a couple of other up and coming artists, collaborating on projects and putting his engineering knowledge to good use as a producer as well as a songwriter.

Even though Redddaz was born in the United States, he still considers himself Trinidadian. "You kinda have no choice when you grow up in a Caribbean household," he stated. "I love my culture from the food, to the music, and especially the people."

He delights in exploring all aspects of his heritage and finds it a great way to come up with topics for his music. Whether it's the partying, carnival celebration, what it was like growing up in an urban lifestyle compared to how his parents grew up in Trinidad, the things Redddaz sees and experiences are all fuel for his writing.

As to his advice to other young artists hoping to make it in the music industry, Redddaz said, "Always remember that the love comes first. You have to want it in order to push yourself forward. You can't expect anyone else to promote you if you're not willing to promote yourself. In my opinion," he concluded, "the music game is looking very flavorful right now. It would be nice to see a lot more new faces, but that is determined by how badly people want to make it. Persistence is key."

You can contact Redddaz at Redddaz.com or Facebook.com/pages/redddaz. For bookings, contact Point A 2 B Management at jcmusicnympho@gmail.com.

Triple Reggae Treat

Reggae fans will likely feast on the triple treat line-up slated for Central Park Summerstage later this summer. But Jamaicans will probably "sweat" to the irie, reggae sounds of Inner Circle when the band takes center stage to headline a special musical tribute to Jamaica's golden anniversary.

The "Bad Boys" of reggae will join the Mighty Diamonds and Israel Vibrations on Aug. 19 to mark the milestone achievement of a nation that gifted reggae to the world.

The three super groups billed for the free, showcase at the Rumsey Playfield will perform from their vast repertoire of hits spanning a total of combined eighty years of presenting the island's musical legacy.

Inner Circle's infectious recording of "Bad Boys" won them a Grammy and international notoriety landing a theme for television's "Cops" crime show.

Their follow-up "Sweat" also enjoyed longevity on top 40 radio playlists during the 1990s.

Also accomplished in the genre, The Mighty Diamonds – Donald "Tabby" Shaw, Fitzroy "Bunny" Simpson, and Lloyd "Judge" Ferguson -- released "When The Right Time Come (I Need A Roof)" in 1976 and their hits followed and remains a constant in 2012. Their recording of "Pass The Kutchie" in 1981 motivated a second generation of reggae recorders named Musical Youth to remake a version a decade later. The Youths called their updated version "Pass The Dutchie." The song charted to pop appeal in England and made them international favorites.

The story of reggae group Israel Vibration's success starts out with their humble beginnings as children battling polio in a Jamaican rehabilitation center. Cecil Spence (Skelly) and Lascelle Bulgin (Wiss) bonded through music while in the clinic and quickly became friends.

As the duo got older, they found the faith of Rastafari and created songs which expressed their spiritual beliefs.

Since then, the duo's music has been spellbinding audiences for over two decades with their mix of traditional roots reggae and deeply spiritual messages such as the critically acclaimed album, "On The Rock" and its follow-up "Free To Move," which reached number one on the CMJ New World charts.

In addition to this significant tribute to Jamaica, Summerstage will feature a number of reggae concerts in parks in all five boroughs.

Bushman and Midnite are among the groups set to deliver the pulsating, reggae beat.

Intimate with the Dub Master

By Vinette K. Pryce

Dub pioneer Lee "Scratch" Perry will perform a rare and intimate show at Gramercy Theatre in Manhattan.

The Bob Marley producer and reggae giant will hit the stage on May 17 at 9:00 p.m.

Acclaimed a trailblazer of Jamaican music, "Scratch" helped shape the sound of dub and reggae music, as an artist with songs such as "People Funny Boy," and as the formative producer for reggae's iconic group, Bob Marley and the Wailers.

His music is regarded as an important influence on artists of generations, particularly on Marley, and the famed dub scientist, The Mad Professor.

Notably, non-Jamaican acts such as The Clash and The Beastie Boys have credited the producer with enhancing their pop and hip-hop recordings.

In 2002, after more than 40 years in the music business, Perry won a Grammy Award for Best Reggae Album, for his recording, "Jamaican E.T."

The Gramercy is located at 127 East 23rd St.

Terre de Blues Festival

Kwaxicolor (Martinique), Traditional Guadeloupe Lewoz, Christian Lavisio, FM Laeti and others.

Sugar cane plays a prominent role in the history of Marie-Galante, called the island of a hundred windmills at one time. Today, for the most part, untouched by tourism development, it offers much to visitors who are interested in that history. Many argue the rum made here is the best in Guadeloupe or the pink sand beaches that ring the island.

Terre de Blues, the name suggests roots music, and implicitly acknowledges the African slaves who labored in the sugar plantation and left a rich musical legacy. Friday will be an evening of Lewoz, the Guadeloupe music that is a direct descendant of these roots. Passions rising and falling with the collective rhythm of the drums and the swirl of the dancers' skirts, it brings listeners into the rural village an unforgettable experience for those who have not experienced it.

Lura opens Saturday's show with a set of batuku, funana, coladeira, and morna, the folk rhythms of the Cape Verdean islands, When Lura walks into the spotlight she embodies the beauty, strength and vulnerability of the small chain of islands in the Atlantic. She delivers these local songs with a succinct directness of a country girl when she does a Batuku, such as "Rabolta Ruben Manuel." The music came about as a way for women to sing and dance during the colonial period when drumming was banned. She sits and pounds out the rhythm on a tightly rolled tchabeta (loincloth) just as women did in a circle while pounding laundry.

We jump to the contemporary era when FM Laeti takes the stage. Born into a musical family, the Guadeloupe native has also lived in Europe, Canada, and the USA. Her distills her global experiences into a powerfully simple soulful approach as expressed on "Rise in the Sun" and "Out of My Hands" from her sparkling debut album "It Will Come Around," released in October. As a soul singer on the rise, she makes a triumphant return to her Caribbean roots.

Richie Spice headlines the evening featuring music from "Book of Job" his 2011 release. The title signifies his commitment to Rastafarian values and roots reggae culture. The album is an expression of these beliefs delivered in the mellow easy listening style for which he is known.

Jazz to Blues to Reggae is the musical journey, Sunday, beginning with a robust set of Kreyol Jazz from Guadeloupean jazz guitarist Christian Lavisio. Christian will be joined by saxophonist David Murray. Murray returns to Guadeloupe, he has also performed there with the Gwo Ka masters, follows with his latest project the Heritage Blues Orchestra, a twelve piece ensemble playing traditional and original blues, featuring James "Blood" Ulmer on guitar. Capping the show will be a set of high energy hard hitting Ivorian Reggae from Alpha Blondy. Blondy whose 30 year career speaking out on issues of injustice carries forward Bob Marley's enormous influence on the African continent.

Monday, begins with Albita, the Grammy-winning Cuban vocalist, followed by Martiniquan Zouk artists Kwaxicolor

and Dominica's Triple Kay.

Triple Kay explodes onstage with a heavy metal attack and revolving trio of vocalists that keep the energy high, driving the tempo is a complex keyboard generated bouyon rhythms that evolved from Cadence Lyppo. Kwaxicolor unites members of two of greatest Zouk bands Kwak and Taxi Creole into a supergroup that features a front line of five vocalists and backing musicians, Albita the renowned vocalist has credits include a role Broadway's Mambo Kings, eight albums and appearances worldwide.

Accommodations, hotels, homes or room rentals are updated daily in English or French on the Marie-Galante tourism website www.ot.mariegalante.com

Ferry service to Marie-Galante leaves from Pointe-à-Pitre, Air Caraïbes also flies there. Guadeloupe is also served by L'Express des Îles from Dominica.

Restoration and Transformation Pilot Project taking place in Petit Goâve, Haiti.

"Up From the Rubble" continues C2C's ongoing mission to serve as an umbrella organization that mobilizes people and resources to help build self-sufficient international communities by working with the community.

This initiative brings local Brooklyn-based businesses and institutions together in a collective effort to pool resources in support of C2C's Restoration and Transformation Pilot Project and the completion of its first initiative, a water distribution system bringing clean potable water to over 16,000 people.

"This exhibit truly captures the passion and vibrant colors that is Haiti," said Marie-Yolaine Eusebe, CEO and FireStarter of

C2C. "It is a visual journey that celebrates the spirit of a people."

Ocean Morisset is a self-taught and published photographer specializing in photojournalism and documentary photography. Ocean fancies himself a humanitarian and enjoys exposing those hidden subject matters that somehow capture the viewer's own self-reflection. A Veteran of the United State Air Force Reserve, Ocean has taught photography to youth in Havana, Cuba and in 2004 traveled to Gonaives, Haiti post Hurricane Jeanne, capturing provocative images for his photo essay "The Aftermath of Hurricane Jeanne." Images from this collection were used to launch fellow Haitian countryman Wyclef Jean's Yele Haiti foundation.

Superheroes unite to save the planet

"The Avengers"
Excellent (4 stars)
Rated PG-13 for intense violence and a drug reference.
Running time: 142 minutes
Distributor: Walt Disney Pictures

By Kam Williams

"The Avengers" is the sixth installment in the Marvel Cinematic Universe franchise launched in 2008 with "Iron Man," and followed by "The Incredible Hulk," "Iron Man 2," "Thor" and "Captain America." What makes this adventure unique is that it's the first in the series to revolve around a team of comic book superheroes.

The actors playing those title characters reprise their roles with the exception of Edward Norton who has been replaced as The Hulk by Mark Ruffalo. Otherwise, we again have Chris Hemsworth as Thor, Robert Downey, Jr. as Iron Man, and Chris Evans as Captain America. The film also features the return of Jeremy Renner as Hawkeye and of Scarlett Johansson as Black Widow, who appeared in Thor and Iron Man 2, respectively.

Since we've already met all the members of "The Avengers," director Josh Whedon doesn't have to waste time familiarizing us with their unique abilities. Instead, the plot unfolds right on the heels of the post-closing credits scene of the previous sequel which had Nick Fury (Samuel L. Jackson) ominously enlisting the assistance of Captain America for a dangerous mission with global ramifications.

So, it's no surprise that, at this picture's point of departure, we find Fury assembling "The Avengers." After all, as the director of the top secret espionage agency,

S.H.I.E.L.D. (an acronym for Strategic Home Intervention, Enforcement and Logistics Division), it is his job to protect humanity, especially from a diabolical villain bent on world domination.

In this case, that would be Thor's evil, presumably-exiled brother, Loki (Tom Hiddleston), who has managed not only to escape from an outer space abyss on Asgard but has gotten his hands on the Tesseract, a cosmic cube containing the key to limitless, sustainable energy. With Loki en route to Earth, it falls to Fury to plan a coordinated defense of the planet.

That task proves easier said than done, since it calls for cooperation among individualistic superheroes with fragile egos who aren't used to sharing the limelight. Thus, we are treated to pre-showdown posturing when Iron Man teases Thor about both his accent and costume by asking, "Doth mother know thy wear her drapes?" Or when he sarcastically compliments Dr. Bruce Banner (aka The Hulk) by saying, "I'm a big fan of how you lose control and turn into a giant green monster."

Of course, such witty banter subsides in favor of camaraderie once Loki arrives with his army of alien warriors called Chitauri. Each Avenger's talent comes in handy, of course, during the ensuing, eye-grabbing fight sequences, including Hawkeye's bow-and-arrow, Thor's hammer, Captain America's shield, and so forth.

Between a sophisticated script and thrill-a-minute special effects, "The Avengers" easily adds up to the best Marvel Comics screen adaptation yet. A remarkable treat which only serves to ramp-up audience expectations for the vaunted franchise's next offering, "Iron Man 3."

Cole Facts showcases its Summer Rose designs

By Tangerine Clarke

Cold Facts designer Michelle Cole continues to amaze us with her talent and innovative sense of how a lady should look and feel when she puts on a piece of garment.

In addition, Cole's signature use of natural fibers is the hallmark of her delightful body of work. Her Summer Rose collection is a testament to this, as seen in the richness in which she creates whimsical ensembles from cotton and silk.

During a re-launch of Summer Rose at the Brooklyn Lion's Club Tea Party on Sunday, April 29, Cole welcomed the colorful spring season with this well tailored collection that is overflowing with originality and elegance. She dressed up her models in stunning white outfits adorned with splashes of hue.

The 40-piece ready-to-wear line is detailed and suited to every body type. The eye-popping pieces received loud applause from patrons. From a sexy pair of shorts paired with a sleeveless top, dresses designed with asymmetric hemlines, tops, firm-fitting and floor length dresses, to a halter-back mini dress that was worn by my Miss Guyana World 2012, Arti Cameron.

This sexy little dress was designed with a cinched waistline and flair bottom skirt. Cold Facts will no doubt earn a cult following with this line that was accessorized with handbags cut from burlap, and designed with bamboo handles. Flirty floppy headwear also complemented the array of designs.

Guyanese-New York based, Cold Facts, also showed off her cutting-edge swimwear as part of the Summer Rose line. The pieces in metallic were finished with white silk cover-ups. The gents were suave looking in shirts of natural fabric that were finished with the color splash concept.

This line is a fitting tribute to the designer's daughter for whom it was named. And one that Cole says did not get the attention it deserved during its 2010 launch, due to the birth arrival of her son Omar.

However, she stayed focused on the collection that represents who she is — a lady who wants to walk into a room and be the center of attention. Someone, Cole added, who wants to be admired by others, and who wants to stand out in a crowd.

The stage is now set for Cole Facts to step into the retail market when she opens her showroom sometime in the near future. In the meantime, the line could be viewed by calling 321-442-7631.

'Una Noche' receives Tribeca awards

By Tequila Minsky

Cuba is a country so close and yet so inaccessible to visit. Director Lucy Mulloy cracks the door quite a bit to give the film-goer a view of life behind the wall that the U.S. government has erected by restricting travel to that island nation.

Surrounded by the layered life in Havana and the pressured friendships of three young adults, Raul, a young man bristles at the limitations of life in Cuba as he dreams, and plans, and later constructs with his friends a raft to bring them to the U.S.

Shot on location, the city of Havana is a very realistic set for Mulloy's narrative film. Details of Cuban life and the energy of primarily non-professional actors frame a story line that takes you into the lives of those struggling to survive and youths' yearning for more.

In his blog, J. Hoberman observes that the film's cinematography imbues Havana with "seductive, shabby glamour." By watching this film, one feels that you are visiting/have visited Havana while equally moved by the plight of the characters.

Thirty-two-year-old Mulloy is British-born and first visited Cuba after her education at Oxford. "I got off the plane; I had never seen anything like this," she said. Within a year, she was in film school at NYU, and then returned to Havana, to find her non-actors and train them. The film, which is her NYU thesis film, was six years in the making from concept to completion; it took about 42 days to shoot.

The director's lens is focused on realism—the struggle for survival—so consuming. In this film, one almost never sees anything remotely uplifting except for the depth of the relationships of the characters.

In New York, when actor Dariel Arrechaga, who plays Raul, was asked about this raw view of life, he matter-of-factly said, "This is how it is." Both he and the director feel this fiction film shows the truth.

Dariel's main concern during the shooting was "am I doing this right?" And, he was assured that he, this neophyte actor was doing fine. He wants to continue acting.

The Cuban government read

Dariel Arrechaga who plays Raul won the "best actor" award, sharing it with his co-actor Javier Nuñez Florian who plays Elio, who was not present to receive his award.

and approved the script. When it came time to travel to the Tribeca Film Festival, obtaining travel documents were no problem for the three lead actors.

In the realm of "art imitates life" and more, two of the actors never made it to New York. After arriving in Miami to change planes to New York, the two actors Anailín de la Rúa de la Torre and Javier Nuñez Florian, who play twins Lila and Elio, veered off to "go shopping." That was on April 19 when they were 'missing in action,' presumably defecting.

Dariel Arrchaga continued to New York participating in the screenings and interviews and was present to receive the Festival's "best actor" award to be shared with the absent Javier Nuñez Florian.

The day following the awards ceremony, the two emerged and gave an interview on Spanish TV in Miami. They said they were remaining in the United States, confirming their defection. They have been staying with de la Rua's uncle. The actors were 15 years old during the filming, five years ago, and became a couple. The entourage traveled for a film screening in February to the Berlin Film Festival, but it was when they received the invitation from the Tribeca Film Festival they thought about defecting. Both want to pursue a career in acting.

The screening of this director's debut film was overshadowed in part during the festival by this sensational news. This side story is like the plot in the film of youth yearning for something more and has now it too has become a part of the story of "Una Noche."

The film garnered several awards. Mulloy was recognized as "best new narrative feature director" and the film also received the "Best Cinematography Award" along with the "Best Actor Award" shared by the two Cuban actors.

Colombia's premier group at Lehman

The legendary Salsa group from Colombia, Grupo Niche, will perform at Lehman Center for the Performing Arts on Saturday, May 19 at 8:00 p.m.

Grupo Niche on its 30th Anniversary Tour is led by songwriter Jairo Varela. The band continues to tour the world, bringing their hot sound and celebrated rhythms to international audiences.

This concert will feature the band's signature song, "Cali pachanguero," in addition to many hits from their 10 gold, three platinum and two double platinum records.

Lehman Center for the Performing Arts is on the campus of Lehman College/CUNY at 250 Bedford Park Boulevard West, Bronx, NY 10468.

Lehman Center is accessible by #4 or D train to Bedford Park Blvd. and is off the Saw Mill River Parkway and the Major Deegan Expressway.

Grupo Niche was formed in Bogotá in 1980 by songwriter, vocalist, arranger, and producer Jairo Varela, who began his music career at age eight with the group La Timba.

Comprised of young musicians from the state of Chocó, Grupo Niche was conceived as new, alternative Salsa with a more international style and flavor. Their first album, 1980's "Al pasito," put Colombia on the map of the world of Salsa.

As Varela broke away from existing musical structures, he also took on Afro-centric issues in all their social and ethnic implications, singing to his homeland, Chocó -- its problems, its marginality, and its poverty. 1984's No hay quinto malo featured their signature song, "Cali pachanguero."

The critically acclaimed Se pasó! was released the following year on the New York Latin Records label. After much success in Colombia, Grupo Niche soon earned international fame and in 1986 became the first Colombian orchestra to perform at Madison Square Garden, playing at the World Salsa Festival along with the world's top acts.

Beginning in the late '80s, Grupo Niche turned to romantic lyrics, leaving behind their songs about social issues. The release of 1989's Tapando el hueco coincided with Puerto Rico's salsa romántica movement.

In March 1989, they played for more than one million people at a concert in Peru, and in September of that year they staged their first European tour, playing in France, England, Germany, Switzerland, and Spain. In 1990, the group embarked on its first Mexican tour, playing 16 concerts at large venues including the mythical Salón Tropicana.

The band has visited the United States more than 100 times, playing for hundreds of thousands of fans, and has performed all over the world.

Grupo Niche has released more than 30 albums, receiving numerous international music awards, including a 2001 nomination for a Latin Grammy Award for Album of the Year for Propuesta. Among its best known hits are "Gotas de lluvia," Una aventura," "Han cogido la cosa," Sin sentimiento" and the famous cumbia, "Canoa rancho."

The band's latest album is 2011's MP3 downloadable Afro Latin Hitz. 2010's Mis favoritas is the group's most recent CD.

'Porgy and Bess' returns to Broadway

The Gershwins' "Porgy and Bess" has triumphantly returned to Broadway at the Richard Rodgers Theater, 226 West 46th St., between 8th Avenue and Broadway.

The show's electrifying new staging is as timeless as ever with themes that reflect the cultural landscape of America, featuring such legendary songs as "Summertime," "It Ain't Necessarily So" and "I Got Plenty of Nothing."

Four-time Tony Award winner Audra McDonald, Drama Desk nominee Norm Lewis, and two-time Tony nominee David Alan

"Porgy and Bess."

IMF policies crippling Jamaican economy

By Carey L. Biron

WASHINGTON, May 8, 2012 - Jamaica's fragile economic recovery would be dangerously hampered by demands by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and other donors, according to a new report released here by the Center for Economic and Policy Research (CEPR).

Jamaica is currently paying more debt interest than any other country, including those in Europe that have been reeling under the near collapse of the euro. In total, the island owes around 18 billion dollars.

"Pro-cyclical macroeconomic policies, implemented under the auspices of the IMF, damaged Jamaica's recent and current economic prospects," the report warns.

"This policy mix risks perpetuating an unsustainable cycle where public spending cuts lead to low growth, exacerbating the public debt burden and eventually leading to further cuts and even lower growth."

In the decade and a half before the recent global financial downturn, Jamaica's growth was already stagnating at just 1.1 percent per year. Since 2008, Jamaica's debts have climbed by nearly a third.

While growth has picked back up somewhat over the course of 2011, the report suggests that high levels of poverty and unemployment will dampen any positive impact.

CEPR researchers warn that IMF-enforced policies could keep the Jamaican economy in a "debt trap" for years.

"The IMF, World Bank, IDB (Inter-American Development Bank), and other multilateral institutions deserve a large share of the blame," CEPR co-director Mark Weisbrot said in a statement. "Their contractionary policies prioritise the servicing of debt over growth and development." Weisbrot notes that the multilaterals have favoured debt servicing over several common anti-recessionary measures, including public investment and stimulus funding. Such tools, Weisbrot suggests, "could help Jamaica get out of the hole it's been in."

For years, the country has owed far more than it has actually made. Last year, according to the IMF, debt-related payments constituted some 126 percent of national income.

To try to get ahead, the government has had to spend around half of its annual disbursements on debt servicing alone. That's more than twice as much as it is able to spend on, for instance, health and education combined.

Jamaica's national economy has been limping since the early 1970s, when the global oil crisis forced the country to rely more heavily on multilateral funding.

Jamaican debt increased slowly but steadily through the 1980s, by the end of which the IMF began to demand that the Kingston government impose structural adjustments on the economy, including trade liberalisation and cuts to public services.

According to many analysts, these policies systematically weakened Jamaican industry and safety nets, bringing down gross domestic product and making it increasingly difficult for the country to pay its external debts.

The global financial crisis has hit the country particularly hard, including by crimping remittances.

In December 2011, the new government of Prime Minister Portia Simpson-Miller was voted into office, having campaigned on a pledge to come up with a new agreement with the IMF within two weeks of coming to power. Simpson-Miller previously held the post in 2006-07.

Since the prime min-ster's inauguration, two IMF missions have visited the island. While all negotiations have remained strictly confidential, the Kingston government is clearly interested by the type of aid it has seen coming from the eurozone.

"If they could give a bailout like Greece, lord have mercy, you would see Jamaica grow and flourish," Simpson-Miller said in March.

In truth, the fact that negotiations have restarted between the IMF and Jamaica marked a turnaround of sorts. In January 2011, the IMF cut off all funding to the island after the Jamaican government - driven by a Supreme Court mandate - flouted an IMF policy prescription not to pay back wages to public-sector employees.

The decision quashed a desperately needed 1.27-billion-dollar loan and also halted the IMF's so-called Article IV consultations, the widely watched annual report on a country's economy.

That decision had significant ripple effects for other multilateral and bilateral funders, with the World Bank, the European Union and the Inter-American Development Bank all announcing similar halts on funding, pending Jamaican reconciliation with the IMF.

According to the CEPR report, "The cut off in funding made it even more difficult for Jamaica to meet the stringent requirements of the IMF and contributed to the anemic economic recovery." Further, without the government's decision to pay the back wages, "the recovery would likely be even weaker."

Currently, another tranche of 350 million dollars is due for repayment by the Jamaican government in July. With that date looming, government officials have been out trying to raise money any way they can. (IPS/GIN)

Athletes shine at Loucks

By Robert Elkin

The 45th Annual Glenn D. Loucks Memorial Track and Field Meet, the largest in the New York met area, for high school athletes drew entries from all over the Metropolitan area, mostly from New York State with more than 150. But one can not count out the 21 schools from Connecticut, four from Maine, 10 from Massachusetts, six from New Hampshire, five from New Jersey, six from Rhode Island, and 10 from as far north as Canada.

These marked the cream of the crop from the schools, both boys and girls, competing for individual honors, and school teams vying for team honors in separate categories. Competition for the most part was so tense, exciting and close. The weather fully cooperated for the three days with athletes making both team and individual headlines on the field, as well as on the track in one of the largest meets ever assembled. Some marks broke into the all-time career list.

Some of the athletes have one or more years left in high school, and, therefore,

Concerns about Test cricket

By Azad Ali

Test cricket in the West Indies is boring, according to a recent study.

Test matches played have produced the fewest percentage of results and lowest scoring rates in world cricket since the beginning of the 2000s.

This was revealed on the website Cricinfo.com recently.

According to the research, there have been 37 results in 61 Tests in the region during the period, making for a rate of 60.65 percent is marginally lower than India (63.16 percent), New Zealand (68.63 percent) and Pakistan (68.75 percent).

Meanwhile, at the top of the list (excluding minnows Bangladesh and Zimbabwe) are Australia (86.11 percent) and England

MAN CITY WINS EPL

First championship in 44 years

By Patrick Horne

There was soccer-fan euphoria in Manchester, England last Sunday, the last day of the English Premier League, but this time the excitement was created by the other Manchester team as Manchester City F.C. won the Premier League and its first championship in 44 years. City defeated Queen's Park Rangers, 3-2, in a most nerve-racking game for City fans who sat on pins and needles throughout, coming to the edge of their seats by the last 10 minutes of the contest.

City, playing at home in the Etihad Stadium, started the game tied for first place in the League with local rivals Manchester United, but had the edge because of a superior goal difference;

United was a shoo-in to beat Sunderland, which it did, 1-0, so City needed victory to lift the Cup. It struggled to penetrate the QPR defense and found itself losing, 2-1, with three minutes to play and United already secured victory.

The faces of defeat were evident throughout Etihad Stadium, and for about three minutes, United was the champion until the last two minutes when Edin Dzeko headed in the equalizer two minutes into stoppage time and with practically no time left on the clock, Sergio Kun Agüero pounced on an assist from Mario Ballotelli to crash home the winner and send the fans and everyone in Manchester into a frenzy. Pablo Zabaleta scored the first goal the contest to give City a 1-0 lead early; Gabriel Cisse and Zamora tallied for QPR.

Despite the loss, QPR, which was fighting to stave off relegation to the lower, Championship League, will remain in the Premiership, while Bolton Wanderers, Blackburn Rovers and Wolves were the three teams relegated. Reading FC and Southampton were promoted to the Premiership for next season and West Ham United and Blackpool FC will meet at Wembley Stadium in London on Saturday, May 19, for the third spot to the Premiership.

Red Bulls Win

3-2 result over the Philadelphia Union last Sunday afternoon; the win was the New York team's fourth straight and put it atop the Eastern Conference. Goals from Joel Lindpere (17th minute), Marcus Hogersson (68th) and Kenny Cooper in the dying stages gave the visitors victory.

Lindpere continues to be productive coming out of the midfield, this time he latched onto a pass from Mehdi Ballouchy and cracked a left-footer into the upper left side of the net.

Hogersson tied the game in the second half after Lionard Pajoy (31st, 46th) gave Philadelphia the 2-1 lead early in the second half. Pajoy scored the Union's first goal to neutralize Lindpere's tally. Cooper scored his ninth goal of the season when he took advantage of mixed signals between Union goal keeper Zac MacMath and his defender, and was able to place the ball, which dropped to him, in an open net.

Philadelphia was unfortunate to have U. S. international Freddy Adu sent off in the 43rd minute after a second yellow card; Adu was the best player on the pitch for Philadelphia with his dangerous passing that sent balls through and over the Red Bulls defense. Trinidad and Tobago midfielder Keon Daniel also had a very creditable outing for the Union. Meanwhile, Ryan Meara had his rookie record snapped as his 324 minutes of goalless playing time ended. New York Red Bulls return to Red Bull Arena on Wednesday, May 23 when they host Chivas USA at 7:00 p.m.

The Los Angeles Galaxy's (3-5-2) struggles continue as it tied the hosts and expansion team Montreal Impact (3-5-3), 1-1, on Saturday night. It took a David Beckham free kick in the 62nd minute for the tie. A crowd of 60,860 fans witnessed the game at Olympic Stadium, the largest crowd for a professional soccer game in Canada. Davy Arnaud scored for Montreal.

Houston Dynamo christened

its new stadium Saturday night with a 1-0 win over DC United and Real Salt Lake secured a win over host Seattle Sounders by the same score line. The New England Revolution pounded the Vancouver Whitecaps to the tune of 4-1; Columbus Crew, which recently signed Trinidad and Tobago international defensive midfielder Chris Birchall, knocked off FC Dallas, 2-1; and the Chicago Fire scored a 2-1 over Sporting Kansas City.

will return next spring to better their performances. Other high school athletes are still awaiting the call from colleges trying to recruit them and offering them scholarships.

Interscholastic action is not over as yet, for the schools are staging championships in their schools coming up within the next few weeks.

What a performance turned in by junior Ed Cheserek, one of the top athletes in the met area. He competes for St. Benedict's High School in New Jersey.

Cheserek put on a tremendous race and crossed the finish line in 4:09.90, the fifth fastest time in the history of the meet going back to 1968. Cheserek's performance in the mile thrilled the fans. The meet record of 4:09.19 was not threatened, for Greg Herzog of the host school still holds it.

Three days earlier on opening day, Thursday, Cheserek anchored St. Benedict's distance medley relay team to a first place performance with a total time of 10:08.92. Cheserek's performances earned him the Outstanding Male Athlete of the Meet Award in a meet named after a former head coach at White Plains High School.

Another junior, Dan Jamieson of Windsor (Connecticut) captured the 200-meter dash in 21.31 and finished first in the semifinals (10.71) but dropped to third in 10.89 in the shorter 100-meter race. Dan is the son of Radcliff

Bowen, who was a soccer player in his native land of Jamaica, West Indies.

The 200-meter clocking for Dan, one of the top sprinters around, marks a personal best one for him.

"My start was good (in my sprints)," Dan said. My father helps me out by encouraging me to do well (in the meets).

In the 400-meter hurdles, Bay Shore's senior Kadish Roberts, whose father Michael and mother Maryann come from Trinidad, crossed the finish line first in 52.85 in a very impressive performance for the Long Island runner. This time was the fourth fastest recording in the history of the Loucks Games, behind Olympian Derrick Adkins (51.40), Rodrigues Pfister (52.41) and James Manigault, who was timed in 52.70.

"I'm happy with my win," said

Roberts, who finished second in the Penn Relays earlier in the spring. "The meet (today) was fun and good and gave us experience going against other athletes (besides our own in league meets)."

The meet drew some past outstanding athletes who were introduced during ceremonies after the morning portion of the activities or on the final or third day's action. The class of 1982 was recognized during that time. There were many officials and political and school leaders on hand and were introduced to the athletes and spectators during the course of the events.

Many of the colleges would have had some representatives on hand but they were more occupied with their own meets, as their season was coming to a close with championship events.

Concerns about Test cricket in the W.I.

(77.65 percent).

The West Indies is the only nation in which the average run rate in Tests has been less than three per over, in contrast to the 1980s during which it was the only country in which batsmen scored at a three-plus rate.

With a Rate Per Over (RPO) of 2.98, they trail Zimbabwe (3.03) and Sri Lanka (3.10) at the bottom of the list while England (3.44), Australia (3.36) and South Africa (3.30) again occupy the three top spots.

The West Indies is the only nation in which the average run rate in Tests has been less than three per over

The website was unflattering in its assessment of Caribbean wickets.

"There used to be a time when cricket in the West Indies used to be about quick pitches, which encouraged bowlers to bowl fast and batsmen to score quickly – in the 1980s the West Indies was the only region in which the average scoring rate in Test cricket was more than three runs per over.

Those were the golden days of West Indian cricket, when most of the batsmen were aggressive and bowlers bowled fast, according to the research.

"Now, cricket in the West Indies is often characterized by slow pitches and slow outfields, which means batsmen do not get value for their shots, fast bowlers don't get much out of it, and bowlers in general struggle to get batsmen out quickly."

The website noted that the recent series marked the first time since 2000 that Australia's run rate in a series was less than three runs per over.

Windies will be very competitive in ODI

The three One-Day Internationals between the West Indies and England from June 16 – 22 in England are expected to be very competitive.

The Windies specialist one-day players will be available and are ready to make meaningful contributions.

Former captain Chris Gayle will be back, along with Sunil Narine and Dwayne Bravo. Marlon Samuels is already in England. These are among 12 players from which the West Indies should have a strong final 11. Players selected to tour are: Chris Gayle, Kieron Pollard, Dwayne Bravo, Marlon Samuels, Andre Russell, Sunil Narine, Darren Bravo, Adrian Barath, Darren Sammy, Denesh Ramdin, Ravi Ram Paul and Kemar Roach.

The bowlers, Kemar Roach, Sunil Narine, Dwayne Bravo, Ravi Ram

Eyes on Cricket

By George H. Whyte

Paul and Marlon Samuels are expected to do a reasonable job.

There is a strong lineup in the batting department. Kieron Pollard, Andre Russell, Dwayne Bravo, Chris Gayle, Marlon Samuels and Darren Bravo should be able to score many runs. Adrian Barath will be getting the luxury of an experienced, swash-buckling opener, which should improve his confidence.

Kieron Pollard Should Be Given A Stint At Test Cricket

Trinidad and Tobago all-rounder Kieron Pollard should be given the opportunity to play Test cricket.

Pollard is internationally known for his hard-hitting batting and brilliant fielding. Although he is well known as a One-Day International player and a Twenty20 specialist, that does not mean that he cannot play Test cricket and be successful.

Pollard should be tested in Tests because the West Indies is in need of two attacking batsmen in the middle order. West Indies batsmen in the middle order are too defensive, thus causing the opposing bowlers to stay on top.

Some form of aggression must be used by the middle-order batsmen to help the West Indies reach winning totals. Pollard will be an asset to the West Indies cricket team and a great boost to the batting. He has sufficient experience to make the necessary adjustments for Test cricket.

The selectors cannot have such a fine cricketer sit idle when he should be meaningfully participating in Test cricket. The selectors must make the call to Pollard. It is for him to accept or refuse.

Australia's David Warner who many thought was only a Twenty20 and One-Day player has turned out to be a valuable player for his Test team, with two Test centuries already.

The selectors ought to do what is correct and beneficial to the team. Apart from the return of Chris Gayle, the Windies batting needs a boost.

Former West Indies Captain Chris Gayle returns to the team.

National Foster Care Month

Foster care - Change a lifetime

You can change a lifetime

All children deserve a safe, happy life — including the more than 400,000 American youth in foster care. Young people in foster care especially need nurturing adults on their side because their own families are in crisis and unable to care for them.

Each May, we salute the compassionate people who make a difference by serving as foster parents, relative caregivers, mentors, advocates, social workers, and volunteers. Thanks to these unsung heroes, many formerly abused or neglected children and teens will either safely reunite with their parents, be cared for by relatives, or be adopted by loving families.

But some children in foster care are less fortunate. Most communities across the country are urgently seeking more everyday people to help these youth overcome their troubled childhoods and realize their full potential. No matter what their age, every young person in foster care benefits from a meaningful connection to a caring adult who becomes a supportive and lasting presence in his life.

The number and diversity of people who were once in foster care might surprise you. In fact, there are an estimated 12 million foster care alumni in the U.S. representing all walks of life. Behind this startling statistic are countless stories of children who grew up to be thriving adults, while others struggled with life's challenges all alone. The difference between triumph and tragedy is very clear. Success stories come about when someone takes the time to offer comfort, provide support, give advice, or simply share a milestone moment with a youngster enduring a difficult family situation.

No matter how much time you have to give, you have the power to do something positive that will change the life of a young person in foster care.

DeBlasio Warns Consumers About Classified Ads
Toll numbers may be a direct line to trouble.
 Classified ads are intended to help people by facilitating communication and advertising available services; however, some of the hotlines & service numbers in classifieds actually hurt the people who rely on them by cheating them of their hard-earned dollars. "Most newspapers print a disclaimer in their classified ad section to warn readers about numbers that are a direct line to trouble. Any number starting with 900, 540, 595 or 871 charges a fee beyond a local call. In some instances, ads initially advertise calls to a local number, but then direct callers to a second number starting with one of the paid exchanges. "Consumers must also question the legitimacy of vague classifieds because they too could be a scam. Before responding to an ad, consumers should verify the source of all information & always be wary about sending money or signing a contract with an unknown party."

EDUCATION & CAREER TRAINING

Improving your career prospects through education

With the economy still recovering from the recession and increased global competition, many disillusioned workers have been left wondering: "How can I set myself apart within a shrinking job market?" Beyond degree attainment and experience, achieving specialized certification in your chosen field may be your best bet.

Earning certification is a signal to current or prospective employers of your dedication to your craft, and a demonstration of your expertise and experience. It is a validation of your skills and knowledge and it can simultaneously enhance your professional reputation while providing an opportunity for continuing education and professional development.

For service or product-based industries, certification helps demonstrate to consumers the quality of your work.

Another significant benefit is salary. Earning a certificate in your chosen field is by no means a guarantee of a pay raise, but it may raise your salary ceiling and strengthen your negotiating power.

To be true, achieving certification is a process, and one not to be taken lightly. Depending on your industry, it could mean passing challenging field assessments or certification exams. In some fields, candidates may need to undergo a rigorous application process through an industry-specific certification agency, or may have to win over a panel of their peers with a presentation of their work portfolio. Each industry has unique procedures and practices.

The market for certification is larger than ever, with employers placing continued emphasis on advanced skills in global business management, project management, information technology, skilled trades, and other traditional fields to more modern credentials in sustainable and green energy or next generation design.

National and local professional organizations are a valuable resource for learning more about certification. Many provide training courses, workshops, or prep materials for those contemplating pursuing a credential. You'll also be able to learn from peers who have already gone through the process. In addition to professional organizations, many colleges and universities offer professional development and continuing education programs.

The important point to remember is that you are your greatest asset. By continually investing in your skills and capabilities, you open doors of opportunity and further your potential.

IMMIGRATION

1. ABUSED OR ABANDONED SPOUSE: If you are married to a US Citizen or green card holder who is abusive or has abandoned you, you may be entitled to work permit and green card even if you are divorced or have certain criminal record. You do not need your spouse to file for you or sponsor you or attend interview with you. This relief is also applicable to child (including step child), fiancée and parent of US citizens or green card.

2. PARENTS OF US CITIZEN: Are you a parent of a US Citizen Child? You may be entitled to relief?

3. ILLEGAL ENTRY/RE-ENTRY: Did you enter the country illegally or were you deported and re-entered illegally? You may still get work permit and green card.

4. THE DREAM: YOUNG PERSONS IMMIGRATION: If you arrived in the US at least 4 years ago, you arrived when you are less than 16 years and you are currently less than 35 years, you need to talk to us!

5. CONDITIONAL GREENCARD: We can help remove conditions on your greencard, even if your spouse is not filing with you and even if you have been denied and placed in removal proceeding. You need not wait for 2 years if you are abused by your spouse or if your spouse died.

6. If you are a child living with a guardian or someone else other than your parent, you may be entitled to work permit and or green card.

7. ASYLUM PROBLEMS AND DEPORTATION ORDERS: Your deportation may be suspended and get work permit & green card.
